

Everybody helps the next guy.

When you attended Southwestern, even if you paid full tuition (and virtually none of our students pay full tuition), a benefactor was underwriting your expenses: Even full tuition covers far less than the full cost of a Southwestern College education.

So where does the rest of what we need to operate come from?

Everybody helps the next guy.

When you graduated from Southwestern College, you took your place among thousands of Moundbuilders who have accepted the responsibility of making outstanding educational opportunities available to current and future students of the college.

Public universities rely on taxpayers to pay the bills. As a private college, Southwestern knows its future rests in the hands of those who know and love the college.

Now it's your turn to help.

Now it's your turn to help. To find out how, contact Jill Johnson, annual fund director, at (620) 229-6288, or jjohnson@sckans.edu, or make an online donation at www.sckans.edu/donations.

Won't you help the next guy?
