Alma Mater

Far above the Walnut valley,
On a lofty height,
Stands our noble Alma Mater,
Bathed in golden light.

CHORUS:

Lift the chorus, speed it onward,
Over hill and vale:
Hail to thee, beloved Southwestern,
Alma Mater hail.

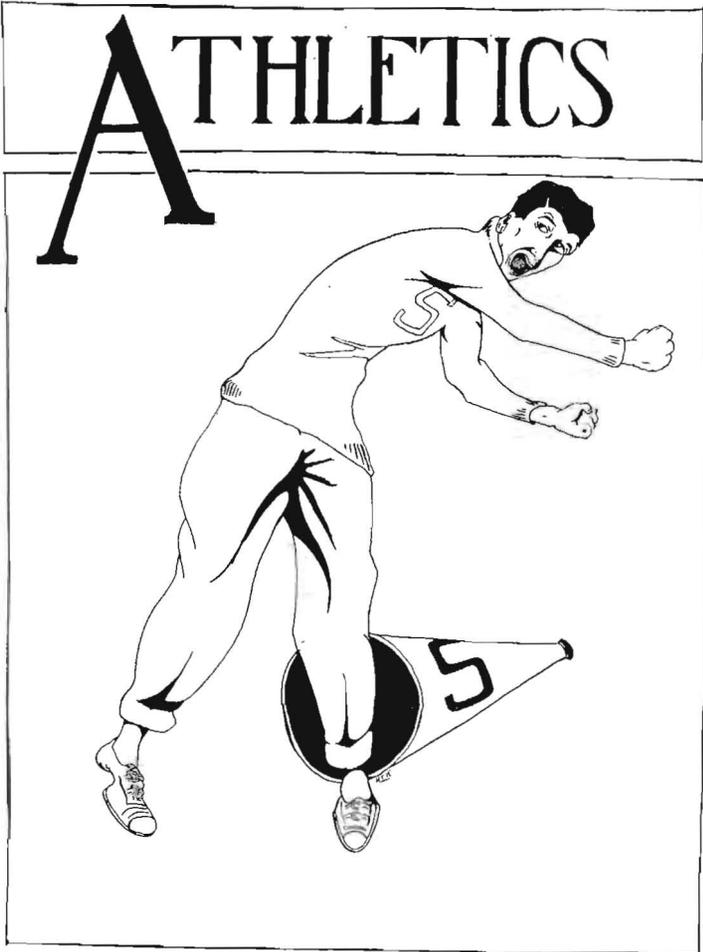

Far above the stir and bustle
Of the busy town,
Reared against the arch of heaven
Looks she calmly down.

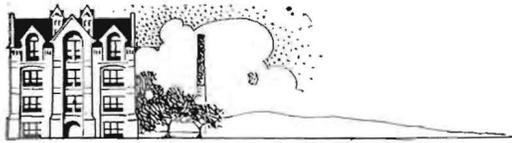

To the heights she calls us daily,
Alma Mater dear,
Heights of knowledge, hope and courage
Free from doubt and fear.

THE FAIRMOUNT GAME

FOR the first time in history the Fairmount Wheatshockers fell before the 1912 Moundbuilders and were swamped by a score of 41-3. The biggest crowd ever assembled inside Athletic Park was out to see a battle royal and the score came as a big surprise to both sides. The dope on the game was about even but the Southwestern team took the field timed to the minute and after scoring a touchdown in the first three minutes of play were never headed. A lone field goal by Captain Chance in the first quarter saved the Wheatshockers from a shutout. Never once were they inside the twenty yard line and their defense crumbled before the brilliant rushes of the speedy Southwestern backs and the terrific plunges of a well trained line.

At 3:35 o'clock Southwestern kicked east to no return. Fairmount failed to gain and Zeigler blocked the punt. Bernstorf recovering the ball. On a triple pass Schmidt to Lear to Wesley the latter circled left end for twenty yards and a touchdown exactly three minutes after play began and Captain Schmidt kicked a perfect goal. Southwestern again kicked off to a ten yard return with Koby playing the best game for the visitors and Zeigler playing a wonderful defense for Southwestern. Fairmount could not gain consistently and Chance dropping back to the thirty-five yard line kicked a perfect goal from placement for the Wheatshockers' only score.

The Moundbuilders again kicked off and Fairmount made twenty-five yards on two successive forward passes but Southwestern braced and took the ball on downs. Bernstorf punted fifty-five yards across the goal line. Fairmount could not gain and the ball went to the Moundbuilders on their own twenty yard line. Bernstorf was hurt, Yeoman going to full and Randels going in at left end.

In the second quarter Southwestern opened up her offense, and with Zeigler, Leekley and Moore tearing great holes in the line marched steadily down the field. Lear dashed off end for thirty-five yards and Leekley plunged off tackle for ten more and a touchdown. Schmidt kicked a difficult goal. Fairmount kicked off and Moore returned twenty yards. Lear running behind a splendid interference made twenty-five yards and Yeoman plunged thru tackle for a touchdown. Schmidt again kicked goal. Fairmount kicked off to Leekley who made a brilliant return of forty yards. Southwestern made thirty-five yards on a pretty forward pass, Schmidt to Rutledge and Lear plunged thru the line for another touchdown. The punt-out went wide with no chance at goal. Fairmount could not stand the fierce tackling and seemed to be growing tired. Fairmount kicked off to Yeoman who returned thirty yards. With Wesley and Lear carrying the ball for long gains Southwestern took the ball to the five yard line where Captain Schmidt plunged thru tackle for the fifth touchdown and a moment later kicked a perfect goal. Fairmount kicked off and on a shift formation the Moundbuilders fumbled. Fairmount made a forward pass of twenty-five yards but could gain no further and Southwestern took the ball in the middle of the field. By a sensational catch of a forward pass Randels raced twenty-five yards for the sixth and last touchdown. Schmidt kicked goal.

Southwestern worked the forward pass five times for a distance of one hundred thirty yards, while Fairmount on an equal number of chances made eighty. Fairmount played on the defensive almost the entire time, and though fighting gamely could not withstand the terrific plunges of the Moundbuilder forwards, nor break up the end runs of their speedy backs. For Southwestern Captain Schmidt played a great game on the offensive, directing his team without a flaw. Calbeck's passes were splendid, the Moundbuilders having but one fumble charged up against them. In the line Leekley, Zeigler, and Moore played a great game on both offense and defense while Wesley, Yeoman, and Lear with their speed were the best ground gainers. Fairmount played a game but losing battle and deserved much better support from their followers than they received. It was simply a case of the best team winning and the local enthusiasts went wild. The game was followed by a mammoth demonstration and the Fairmount Hoodoo was forever broken.

THE SEASON OF 1912

SIX letter men back and only fourteen men eligible for the first game was the situation that faced Coach Fred Clapp at the beginning of the 1912 season. The season opened with the husky Kansas Aggies in their own lair and after a fierce struggle for fifty minutes the Moundbuilders were returned the losers 19-7 and the better team had won. One week later the sturdy Kansas Normals journeyed across the State and Southwestern again fell before a better drilled and a steadier team, this time 26-7. But worse than the loss of the game was the loss of Bernstorf who left the fray with a broken arm. After a two weeks' rest the rejuvenated Moundbuilders, strengthened by the return of Manager Yeoman, invaded the Catholic camp and decisively trounced St. Marys 32-7. This time the team received another severe blow when Zeigler was sent to the hospital with a torn ligament in his hip. Their easy victory over the Catholics came near proving disastrous for in the game at Sterling a week later the best they could do was a 7-0 victory over the weak Cooper College team.

The next contest on the local gridiron was a fight to a finish with the State Manual Training Normals from Pittsburg. After the Normals scored a touchdown early in the game and had missed an easy chance at goal, the Moundbuilders came back fighting hard and strengthened by some Freshmen recruits worked their way over for a touchdown with just six minutes left to play and Captain Schmidt kicked a perfect goal which won the game 7-6.

The one big game of the year was with the Fairmount Wheatshockers. The Moundbuilders were never in better condition and entered the contest timed to the minute and surprised even their most ardent admirers by running up a score of 41-3. True the last year's champions were not at their best but at that they were never inside the Moundbuilder's twenty yard line and their only score came on a kick from placement from the middle of the field. The speedy Southwestern backs fairly rushed them off their feet and the forwards shattered their line at will. It was the first time in history that Fairmount had lost to the Moundbuilders and the score came as a big surprise.

The only game outside the state was with the Oklahoma Methodists at Guthrie and though the Oklahomans scored first, they fell before the dazzling offense of the Moundbuilders and lost 34-7. The grand finale came with Friends University which made a record for the Missouri Valley with the Moundbuilders on the long end of a 151-0 score piled up in forty-six minutes.

After the team once came to its own and strengthened by the husky Freshmen they developed into a truly wonderful team and in the eight scheduled games scored 275 points to their opponents' 65. Relying mostly on open style play they scored a touchdown on every team they met. Besides the eight games on the regular schedule the second string men played the Oklahoma Preparatory team to a standstill at Tonkawa and defeated the Oklahoma Baptist College 9-6 at Blackwell. The last seven games stored away in the won column shows that the team was getting better all the time and probably never played a better game than that against the Friend's team which furnished one sensation after another.

On offensive play, Captain Carl Schmidt was perhaps the most valuable man. His work at quarterback was above question, picking the weak spots in the opposing teams and driving his offense hard from the kickoff. Perhaps his most valuable asset was his ability with the forward pass. He also kicked 33 goals from touchdown out of a possible 42 chances. He is a Senior and his place will be hard to fill.

In Bernstorf Southwestern had one of the best fullbacks in the state and but for injury early in the season he should have had a place on the all state team. With him in the backfield were the diminutive Lear and Wesley who were veritable whirlwinds of speed and their play at times was sensational. Both are Sophomores in College—Rutledge closing his fourth year on the team played a brilliant game and his graduation means another hard place to fill. With Yeoman and Randels they formed a great trio of ends and starred in almost every game. Zeigler was the mainstay in the line and played brilliantly and by some officials was chosen on the all state team. Perhaps the gamest little man of the lot was Calbeck at center who finished his football career with a wonderful season. McKibben, Carlson, Curfman, Leekley, Templin, and Moore completed the line that was to play so important a part in the season's success. Besides these were Smith, Dadisman, Walker, Gibson, and McCormick who played splendidly at times and with another year's seasoning will prove to be stars. While many good men were developed this season the ones who bore the brunt of the whole thing were, Schmidt, Wesley, Lear, Bernstorf, Yeoman, Rutledge, Zeigler, Calbeck, and Curfman and too much credit can not be given them for the success of the season.

BASKET BALL SEASON

THE 1911-12 Basketball season was rather a disastrous one for Southwestern. Opening the season with a week's swing around the conference circuit the team started out in good shape and with good prospects but after the first game three of the regulars were called home and the team was never pulled together again. True to their contracts the Moundbuilders finished their schedule though losing every game on their trip. After a week of hard training the team recovered somewhat and finished the season in fairly good form. Of the old men only Zeigler was back to start the 1912-13 season but the new men have shown more class than any team since the state champions in 1909-10. Besides Zeigler who has no peer in the state as a center, Coach Clapp had Robieson, the sensational forward from the Winfield High School, Randels, perhaps the classiest man of the entire squad who hails from Anthony, Leekley, the Arkansas City High School star, Newman of the Winfield High School League team, and Fisher and Walker from the local Academy. Never perhaps has Coach Clapp had such material to pick from and the season's result is full of hopeful expectation.

GIRL'S BASKET BALL

THE Girl's 1911-12 Basket Ball season was one of the most successful in the history of the school and set a record for games won, winning nine out of eleven, losing only to Fairmount and that alone kept them from the state championship. With five of the old team back they started the season in fine form and kept up their winning pace throughout the entire season. The whole team received much favorable comment for their play and their splendid conduct both at home and abroad and have done much to place Southwestern in the high position she now holds in intercollegiate athletics. Southwestern may well be proud of her 1911-12 Girl's Basket Ball team and their record will be long remembered.

BASE BALL

THE SEASON 1912

SOUTHWESTERN ought to be satisfied with the 1912 baseball season for it was a successful one from every viewpoint. There was a fine spirit among the players, and an evident determination on the part of every one to do his best at all times for the good of the team. They were regular in their practice and worked hard from the beginning to the close. There were no complaints, no jealousies, no cliques. Every player forgot the personal equation and forgot or at least concealed any disappointment he might have felt. The coach had his way unhampered. He could change the batting order, switch players from one position to another, substitute players, all without criticism. There was no sulking or quitting. This good feeling was a factor in the team's success and the writer feels free to add this word: never in nine years coaching has he coached a team whose members showed such fairness toward one another and toward the coach.

The team was a success because it improved all the time, and at the close of the season was playing better ball than at any other time. This fact shows sustained interest and hard work. Sometimes a team will start well and finish poorly but such a team is a failure. But it takes a team with real stuff to finish stronger than it began. Again the season was successful because every player was a good student and taking real College work. They were not merely enrolled to see how big a bat they could swing without breaking an arm or how hard they could throw a ball. They were real representative of the faculty, students and alumni. The players both at home and abroad conducted themselves like gentlemen. They played clean ball in the field and acted like sensible college students on trains, in hotels, and wherever they were and the school need not be ashamed of the players of 1912.

Then the team was a success from the standpoint of games won, and that is the customary yard stick for measuring a team's success. The team won ten games, lost six and tied one. That would be a good record for almost any college team under almost any condition, but when it is remembered that five of these six games were lost early in the season while the team was yet in an experimental stage and also on foreign grounds the record is really remarkable. Only one game was lost on the home grounds. The fielding and base running was good and the team was well balanced. I feel certain that in the number of runs scored the team far surpasses any team in the Kansas Conference in the same number of games. The team did not boast of any star who far outshone the rest but in different games different players did heroic work. That was one of the good things about the team.—From the report of Coach Mills Ebright.

MILLS EBRIGHT.

Little dope is available on the season of 1913 but Manager Wesley has one of the best schedules ever arranged for a local team.

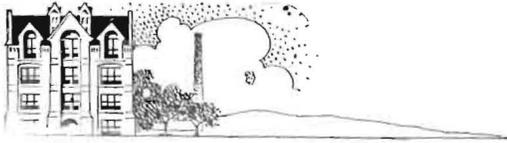

TRACK AND FIELD

THE 1912 track and field meets were fairly successful except that they were all with Oklahoma teams and such meets are seldom satisfactory. Some good individual records were made and the showing at the State meet was very creditable. The first meet was with the Chilocco Indians at the Winfield fair grounds and the red men won the meet by a bare two points, score 55-53. Helt, Hodges, Hutton, Zeigler, and Fisher scored the most points.

The next meet was with the Oklahoma Baptists at Blackwell, April 22, and the Moundbuilders lost again 68-41 with Zeigler and Hutton scoring the highest individual points. The next meet was at Chilocco and with the red skins six points ahead a deluge of rain stopped the meet and another chance was lost. The last meet was with the Okla. Baptists and this time the purple got revenge for the earlier meet and won 62-54. Rex Lear appeared for the first time in an entire meet and was the individual star. In addition to this was the individual meet which was very poorly attended. The contest was a fight to a finish between Lear and Hodges, the latter finally winning 43-42. Southwestern's three representatives at the State meet made a wonderful showing and were greatly praised by the members of the conference. Paul Helt broke the State record for the broad jump when he leaped twenty-two feet and one inch. Zeigler set a State record in the javelin throw when he cast it 147 feet, 5 1-2 inches. Hutton running the mile, while he did not finish first, came in ahead of record time in one of the fastest miles ever run in the State.

TENNIS

TENNIS as a sport for exercise, recreation and real enjoyment, is perhaps more universally played by the students of Southwestern, both men and women, than any other form of athletics. Because it may be played by women and not be too strenuous for them and also may be played by men as vigorously as any other sport, the reason for its popularity among the students is at once seen.

Mrs. Claude Martin of Winfield who is very much interested in tennis for the young ladies, each year offers a silver trophy cup to the winner of the singles tournament. In 11-12 the matches were very closely contested between Pearl Schroeder, Maud Vaughan, Celia Light, and Mabel Jennings. In the first round Vaughan defeated Schroeder, and Jennings defeated Light, leaving Vaughan and Jennings to play the finals. These were won by Miss Vaughan in three consecutive sets which were very interesting and the result for some time was in doubt. No other school in the State has four lady players who are equal to the four who contested for the Martin Trophy.

In May a tournament between the men's teams of Baker University and Southwestern was held at Winfield. Warren, Fisher and Vaughan played for Southwestern and Hopper and Siegrist for B. U. Siegrist d. Fisher, Siegrist and Hopper d. Vaughan and Warren, and Hooper d. Vaughan in the duce sets 10-8, 11-9.

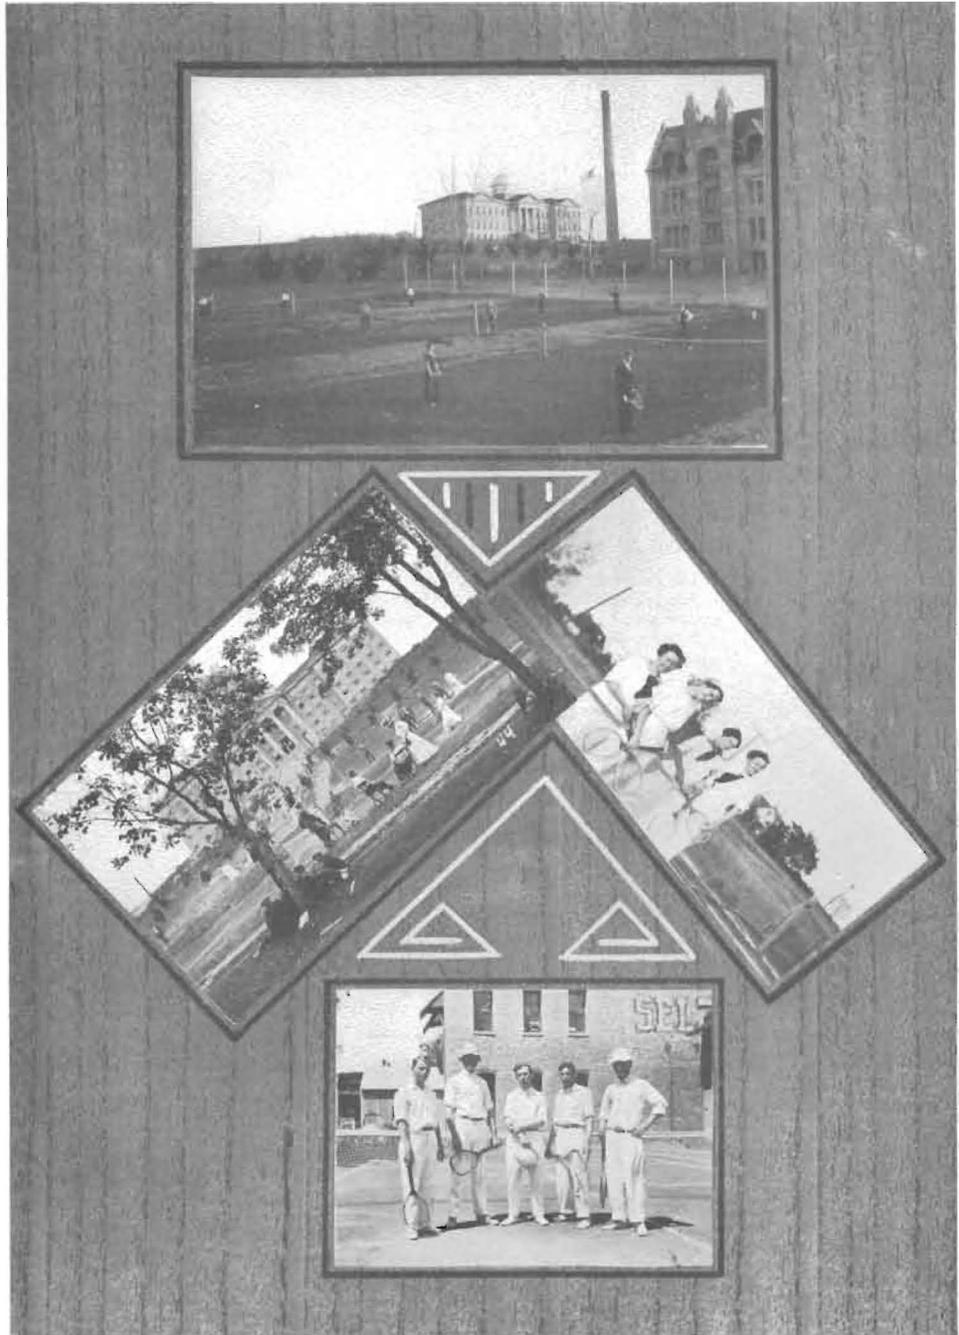

The Intercollegiate Tournament for 1912 was held at Baker University. On account of the heavy rains the matches were played on a concrete court and in the gymnasium. K. U., K. S. N., K. S. A. C., B. U., Bethany, and S. C. were represented. Vaughan and Warren were the S. C. players. In the doubles semi-finals S. C. was defeated by B. U. 11-9, 1-6, 7-5. This was the most closely contested of any match of the tournament and Southwestern at one time lacked only one point to claim the match. The B. U. team then defeated the K. U. team in a surprisingly easy manner, thereby winning the doubles championship. The "dope" favored Hopper of B. U. for the singles. During the season he had played at K. U., Washburn, William Jewel, Okla. U., and Southwestern, and was undefeated at the opening of the finals between him and Vaughan. His previous success made Hopper somewhat over-confident. Vaughan won the first two sets, 9-7, 6-4, lost the third, 4-6, and won the fourth, 6-3, which gave him the match and Southwestern the STATE CHAMPIONSHIP in singles.

THE INTER-HIGH SCHOOL TRACK MEET AND ORATORICAL CONTEST

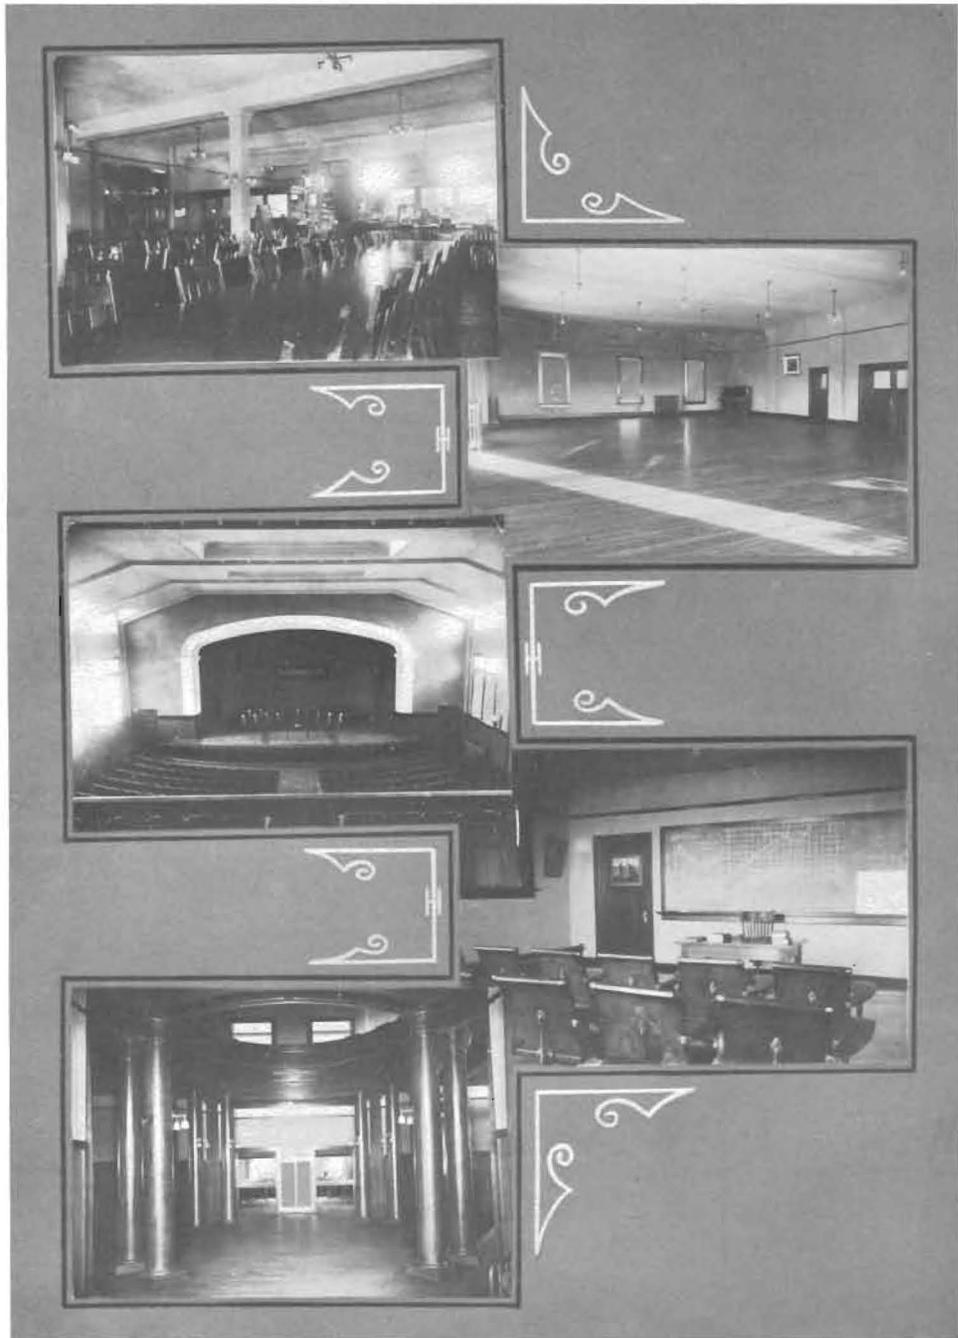

IN 1907 the Southwestern Academy instituted what is known as the Southwestern Inter-High School Track Meet and Oratorical Contest. The importance of these contests have increased until each Field day is a gala day for the College, and the 1912 season was the best ever held, five new records being set. Each year many beautiful medals and cups are given away to the leading athletes and orators. The High Schools all over Central Kansas have become attracted by the meet and it is the strongest meet held in this part of the State. Last year Wichita won the meet with Douglass a close second. Charles Stiller of Florence won the Oratorical contest, and Olin Collier of Winfield the Declamation contest. The individual star of the meet was Wilder of Douglass who won 14 of 17 points that took second place in the meet he winning the individual loving cup. Leekley of Arkansas City broke two records and Cassidy of Wichita and Starr of Florence one each.

Professor Stickel, who has charge of the meet, is making preparations for a mammoth meet this year and it promises to be the best ever held in this part of the State.

THE PRESIDENT

Since the coming of President Mossman to Southwestern in the Fall of 1905 the school has been placed among the high ranking colleges of the State. To-day after eight years of untiring service in behalf of Southwestern, the results of his splendid executive and administrative ability have been shown in many ways. The endowment a minus quantity when he came, has been increased to $160,000; from an enrollment of 220, with only 43 in the college department, the institution now boasts of over 435 of which number 221 are collegiates; the alumni then numbered only 86, while now 226 men and women scattered over all the world look back to Southwestern as their Alma Mater, and 29 Seniors will soon be added to their list. With the co-operation of the trustees, the President's unceasing industry has increased the property value of the institution from $75,000 to $300,000. Over 3500 volumes have been added to the library; an Athletic Park has been purchased and a much needed gymnasium built. The erection of Richardson Hall in 1909, a structure costing $70,000, marks one of the greatest achievements of President Mossman's administration.

Frank E. Mossman received his Ph. B. from Morningside College, Sioux City, Iowa, in 1903, and his M. A. from Morningside two years later. During 1904-05 he did post-graduate work at Chicago University. In 1905 he became President of Southwestern College. Upper Iowa University granted him the D. D. degree in 1908.

THE SENIORS

THE class of '13 has succeeded in the face of difficulties and obstacles. Confronted with the ill-omended numeral '13, they have dauntlessly pressed forward despite its threatening influence. Though the colors, crimson and black, may seem depressing, yet, they do not signify that the class is in a moribund condition; rather they are a symbol of danger to all hindrances and problems which dare to rise in hostility before their standard-bearers.

This class has the distinction of being the largest graduating class in the history of the school. Twenty-nine claim allegiance to the crimson and black. Otherwise, there is nothing peculiarly distinctive to differentiate it from the classes of the past. Like all other classes no certain one has exclusive possession of all the learning, for among its members are brilliant lights in History, English, Science and Education. True, no Gibbons, Shakespeares, Darwin or Pestalozis have as yet appeared on the horizon, but no one is able to prophesy what the future may bring forth.

When we were Freshmen, we had a vision of those wonderful heights which Seniors attain. The path upward seemed rough and almost insurmountable, yet by persistent effort we have at last realized the vision of our first year.

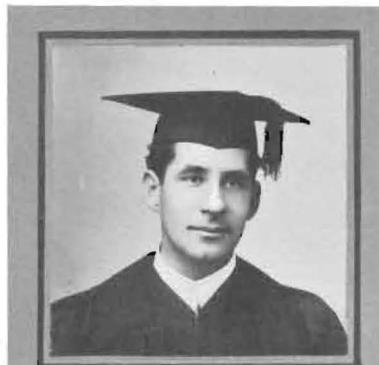

Now, as we are ready to descend the beloved Hillside and enter the "University of Hard Knocks," we pause for a moment to recall the past. Three years we have spent in Richardson Hall, four years we have trodden the Campus; and these years have brought their share of joy, happiness and toil. The associations and friendships formed between Professors and classmates, memory will ever keep aglow. The success of the Junior play, the fiercely contested class scraps, the joyous picnics, and the hilarity of the tacky party will not soon be forgotten.

We now wend our various ways down the Hillside, and as we pass along, that dear old song comes to our lips:

Far above the Walnut valley
On a lofty height,
Stands our noble Alma Mater
Bathed in golden light.

Lift the chorus, speed it onward,
Over hill and vale.
Hail to thee beloved Southwestern,
Alma Mater, hail!

THE JUNIORS

THE coming of the Fourteeners was an epoch in the history of Southwestern. Preparatory to this event President Mossman and the Trustees had built Richardson Hall. In memory of this illustrious Class this Hall will probably be left to do service for coming classes. Conspicuous at first because of numbers and fine appearance, we soon impressed ourselves upon the life of the whole school. In fact it was but a short time until the whole school spoke our language and had adopted our mode of dress. While we did assist the Faculty by taking the '13ers in hand, and also by suggesting discipline to the '15 Bunch, we would not presume to mention such minor affairs.

The suffix '14 to the names prominent on the records of the school will intimate something of our real prominence and merit. We would only allude to the fact that during our first two and half years that we have won some thirty-seven S es, and that during this time only eighty-four have been granted to Collegiates. But it is not alone in athletics that we excell. We have taken three of the twelve S es granted in debate. While, in Oratory we hold every S granted by the school. A farther idea of our Oratory achievements can be had from the following: 6 Firsts; 4 Seconds; 3 Thirds in Collegiate Contests, 3 Society contests and 3 Inter-High School Contests. Although, we have but few preachers among our numbers, we are leaders in religious activities. In the social life of the school—well, there wouldn't be enough to speak about if it weren't for the Juniors.

To conclude, we are a progressive and enterprising class of men and women. We respect, but do not depend on the school's faculties. We rely on our own. We admit our superiority, but do not extol it. We are in school for fun, for culture, for honor; we have shown you that. However, we are also here for training, for business, for life; this we will show you. Untill then, S O L O N G.

THE SOPHOMORES

WHEN we were Freshmen, we made such a big noise that everybody was shocked at our numbers, and the frightened Sophs cowered tremblingly in the darkest corners. And it was two weeks before their quivering brains could digest and assimilate the fact that we weren't the largest class, but the liveliest and gamest bunch that ever slipped over these hospitable portals. Three minutes after the class fight had begun, two-thirds of the Sophomore men reclined quietly upon their backs, while we victoriously disported ourselves about upon their chests.

We are the wise ones, all right. We are the crowd that made that timorous bundle of green boneheads shipped in this year, and labeled "Freshmen" look like an amoeba beside an elephant. Kindly ask them to confide to you about the time they cowardly refused to accept our tug of war challenge in chapel, while the entire college scoffed at their bravery. Beg them to tell you concerning the night they invited their girls to a party, and when the promised ice cream did not come, they had to feed them plebian pop-corn and apples. If you can really bring yourself so low as to speak to them (we can't), just ask them if that picture of the mulish Freshman class which we dropped in Chapel didn't look natural. Perhaps they can give you a few pointers about some water pumpkins, too. But, if they offend your aesthetic taste as much as they do ours, you need not go near them, let them alone. We can tell you all about it.

Now, Caroline, I think you've now begun to get us. Our class has more fire, grit, ingenuity, and enterprise to the square inch than any of these others have to a cubic mile. Perhaps you would like to know something about the next foot-ball manager, this year's base ball manager, and the glee club manager. Or maybe you would like to know what class has the record of four members in the student council at once, and an independent glee club. If you are interested, ask us about it. Ask us about our track record, our base-ball record, our debate record, our Glee Club record, our foot-ball record. Ask us. If you want to know anything else, ask us. We're the class that knows. That's us.

THE FRESHMEN

Of course, we are a set of conceited idiots that really belong on the hill to the north. Of course, Southwestern would be much better off without us. It is very presumptuous for us to so much as let our likenesses appear in these pages along with such an intelligent aggregation as our beloved friends, the Sophs. Quite likely our faces may recall to their aesthetic minds the unwelcome thought of a plunge into the cool waters of Dutch creek. Or perhaps, they have forgotten.

But we're here, the largest Freshman class that ever enrolled in Southwestern. So you must make allowances if there are more "freaks" in our class than there have been in any other. And we want you to ask yourself: What would Southwestern have done to Fairmount last fall in the football game if it had not been for Randels, and Zeigler, and Leekly, and Moore, and Smith, and, oh well, all the rest of our Freshmen athletes? What kind of a basket ball team would Southwestern have had if Zeigler, and Newman, and Robieson, and Randels, and Leekly had not been on the team? Oh yes, you Sophomores, and even you Juniors and Seniors, can look down on us in your superior way, but you know very well that if you could show a record like we have made already, Southwestern wouldn't be big enough to hold you.

But our achievements are not confined to the gridiron or the gymnasium. We study a little once in a while. (Ask our profs.) Then our president, Rufus Baker, won a place on the college debate team, and another member served as substitute which is better than the Sophomores did, even if we do say so.

Now honestly, we think we've done a little this year of which Southwestern may well be proud. This is our first year. We know we're not perfect. There is plenty of room for improvement. But we've done something and we hope everybody will bear with us for a few years more for we are going to do something more.

THE ACADEMY

THE ACADEMY has prospered in advantages as well as in standard since Professor Stickle has given it his undivided attention. This department of the institution boasts of producing forensic men, as four men on the College debate squad, and all of the orators of the present year are graduates of the Academy.

Owing to the great interest taken in the Academy by Professors Dunlevey and Stickel, and other influential members of the Faculty, the Preps well appreciate the fact that they have had a part in most all of the student activities of the school.

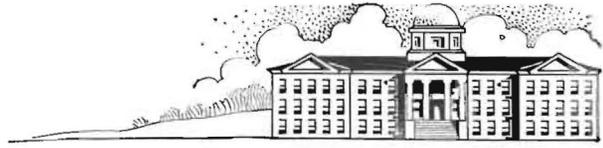

Altho' few in numbers the Senior Acs boast of their might in athletics and debate. When it comes to the social events of the school they are always in the lead. Ray Littell and Alden Salsar are on the Academy debate team, while Schoolmaster Robinson debates in between times. Bill Blackwelder played on the College basket ball team, was Captain of the Academy team, and also high jumps. Kanaga is an all round athlete. Barnstable makes them all get up and move in the cross country. Junior Robinson is the youngest student that has ever graduated from the Academy. We could write a page about the Fourth Ac girls, but suffice it to say that they always get good grades, hold most of the responsible positions in Sun Areta, and won the basket ball championship of the Academy.

The Third Academy Class is the largest class in the history of the Academy. The class is represented by four men on the Academy debate squad. In the College two mile cross country, the Thirds were successful in taking second place. The managership and three places on the Academy Basket ball team were held by men from this class. It is the class of leaders.

The Second Academies who have reached the wise fool stage in their Academy life, are beginning to make things come their way. They have made a good start this year by winning the Boy's Basket Ball Championship of the Academy.

As for the Freshmen Acs. all we can say is that they are a promising lot.

SOUTHWESTERN SCHOOL OF MUSIC

THE Southwestern College School of Music has made a very substantial growth during the past two years, particularly in the vocal department. It is the policy of the music faculty that music should be studied not only by those who expect to make its teaching a profession, but by every student of the college; making it a scientific and cultural branch of knowledge. To this end students of all departments are enrolled as special students of voice, piano, violin and harmony, and in organizations that not only give a definite discipline to the individual, but which contribute largely to the social and religious life of the school.

The School of Music has been under the direction of Professor E. C. Marshall, Mus. B., for the past two years. He is a voice teacher and director of Glee Clubs and Choral organizations. His work has been a decided success, and it is thru his high ideals, untiring energy and perseverance that the School of Music has attained such efficiency and come to play such an important part in Southwestern.

The piano department, under the direction of Miss Lela Niles, has grown in enrollment and enthusiasm. Miss Niles is a very able instructor and her strong and pleasing personality has endeared her not only to her pupils but the entire student body.

Miss Helen Hamilton came to us this year from the Oklahoma Musical Institute. She is well qualified for her position, and has been a valuable addition to the piano department.

Professor Edgar B. Gordon, who teaches violin, has proven thru continuous devotion and hard work his efficiency to head that department. He is a splendid performer and instructor, and besides his work with the violin he conducts classes in harmony.

THE COLLEGE MALE QUARTET

"For the past seven or eight years Southwestern has kept a male quartet in the field during the Summer vacation. With the exception of the second tenor, which position was ably filled in 1911 by Wayne Curfman, the present quartet has spent two entire Summers in the field, and have been actively engaged in lecture course and concert work during the past three Winters. They have made extensive tours thruout the patronizing territory, and have had much to do with popularizing Christian Education. The increase in attendance in the institution is largely due to the campaign work done by a group of men of which the quartet is a prominent part. They represent the four college classes, and are representative of the student life in oratory, debate, athletics, social and religious life as well as music. Southwestern has been proud to have these men represent her thruout the State."—President Mossman.

THE LADIES' TRIO

The Southwestern Ladies Trio has been doing active field work during the past two summers. Their work has been of the same nature as that of the quartet. The trio has covered a large part of the territory, and have aided materially in advertising the college, and in placing Christian Education before the people. Besides their field work they have been called upon time after time to fill lecture course dates, and they are growing increasingly popular with each concert. The Trio is composed of women of the highest type and is truly representative of the ideals of Southwestern.

COLLEGE GLEE CLUBS

Among the most popular organizations of the school are the glee clubs. In 1911-'12 the first college men's Glee Club was organized. The present Glee Club is composed of seventeen members. The women's Glee Club was organized this year and has a membership of thirty. Both clubs have appeared in concert at the annual conference, and have taken numerous trips into the surrounding territory. The annual concerts of these clubs in Richardson hall are most enjoyable affairs.

THE ORCHESTRA

For years Southwestern has been fortunate in orchestral work. The present orchestra is composed of twelve instruments and is well up to the standard. Under the direction of Professor Gordon they have been working on many standard overtures. The orchestra has been giving invaluable service in oratorios, chorals and in chapel music. Advanced members of the college orchestra are eligible to the Winfield Orchestral Club, which is one of the leading musical organizations in this section of the State.

ART

THE Art department of Southwestern is a young but thriving department of the institution. It is represented under the following heads: "Representative Drawing," "Constructive Form" and "Color and Design." "Representative" form is the correct graphic delineation of nature. "Constructive" form is drawing on an architectural basis. "Designs" is a thing that makes a work of art a unit; that makes it a whole, rather than a haphazard collection of unrelated things, or a slice of unassimilated nature. A radical new form of Design is very nearly inconceivable. The great and really difficult task is to draw beautifully and expressively without drawing falsely.

This the Department is teaching not only in oil, water color, pastel, crayon and charcoal but also in the new branch of the Department which was organized this year: that of china painting.

THE SCHOOL OF BUSINESS

THE School of Business of Southwestern has felt "The thrill of life along her keel" under the efficient management of Professor T. A. Spence. He graduated from the Normal and Business Departments of Central Normal College, Great Bend, then spent three years in Southwestern, where he also graduated from the School of Business in 1910. He came back to us after two successful years at the head of the Commercial Department of the Kingman County High School.

The latest methods in Banking, Real Estate, Insurance, Jobbing, Rail Road, Retail, Wholesale and Commission have been introduced into this department. A class in Modern and Psychical Methods in Salesmanship has recently been added. The Williams and Rogers text books are used in Book-keeping and in many of the other branches.

The student is given actual Commercial Work to do. Our course in Banking and Business Exchange is a distinctive feature in the school. A complete organization is maintained and a regular course in Clearing House and Banking is carried on. The Students in turn acting in the capacity of remittance clerk, teller, book-keeper, cashier and performing duties similar in every way to those in the leading banking institutions.

Professor Spence is ably assisted in this work by Harry L. Wilkinson, who graduated from School of Business of Southwestern in 1912.

Half a century ago, stenography was in its infancy in the United States, and it was many years after the introduction of stenography until the typewriter was sufficiently perfected to justify the manufacture on a large scale.

The ancient amanuensis has now given her place to the stenographer, and the demand for capable stenographers is greater than the supply. Our school helps supply this demand.

Our Stenographic Department uses the Gregg System of Shorthand and Rational Touch System of Typewriting. These systems are acknowledged to be the best.

Miss Maud E. Draper, who has charge of this work is a graduate of the Commercial Department, University preparatory School of Oklahoma, and a Certified Teacher, Rochester (New York) Business Institute.

The School of Business of Southwestern is making itself felt in the world, for our graduates go into excellent positions all over the country.

ATHENS

Brief History

ATHENS, the oldest and largest Mens' Literary Society in Southwestern, will celebrate her quarter-centennial anniversary next year. In 1889, at the time of her organization there was only one other Society in the College. For a few years Cadmus was a live competitor for oratorical and debate honors. She lived only a short time after Athens was organized, however, and the latter was left to occupy the field alone, which she did for many years. The first meetings of the society were held in the old library room of North Hall. A year after the birth of Athens, a sister society, Belles Lettres, was organized. The two societies entered into a partnership and purchased furnishings for the southwest room on the fourth floor of North hall. The young society met in this hall for twenty years, and in it laid the broad foundation upon which is built the mighty Athens of to-day. And it was in this room that the men of Athens acquired the habit of winning in oratory and debate, and of becoming the vital factors in the activities of the college. With the erection of Richardson Hall in 1910, Athens and Belles Lettres were assigned a hall in the new building. The room is situated at the southwest corner of the second floor overlooking a delightful vista of hills and valleys. The hall has been furnished by the societies regardless of expense. The furnishings are heavy quarter-sawed oak, and the walls are finished in a soft cream color with a tasteful stencil design. And as it stands to-day, free of debt, it is one of the most desirable Society Halls in the West.

Athenian Policy

Athens is stronger this year than she has ever been before. Seventy per cent of the men enrolled in the College Department are her members. But the society takes pride not only in the size of her membership, but also in the type of men of which her membership is composed. Three-fourths of the Freshmen who enrolled this year in the College department from the High Schools have chosen Athens as the Society to which they desire to belong. And it is a very significant fact that unprejudiced men coming in from the High Schools should so judge merit. Perhaps this almost unanimous decision was caused not only by their preference for the Athenian type of College men, but also by the realization of the fact that the policy of Athens is to push forward and develop the new men as well as those already known in College circles. This policy of Athens may be noted in the fact that all of the new men coming in from High Schools who entered the College debate and oratorical contests were Athenians.

Athens in Oratory

The record of the Athenian Literary Society in Oratory is one unequalled by any society in the State of Kansas. Of the twenty-one men who have represented the College in the "old line" state contests, seventeen have been Athenians. Three times has Southwestern won the State contests against the other fourteen colleges of Kansas, and in every one of the cases the winning orator has been an Athenian. Only last spring Howard Finley was given first place in the Kansas State Oratorical Contest. Athens is also proud of her record in prohibition oratory. A man from her ranks a few years ago won the local, state, interstate and second place in the national contest, obtaining a higher ranking than any other Kansas orator has ever received. The oration of Lewis Simes was given first in thought and composition in the national contest of the summer of 1911. This year Howard Finley is the Southwestern representative in the State prohibition contest. Perhaps one of the causes for such a wonderful record in oratory is the great annual Athenian Oratorical contest, in which every member of the society is allowed to take part. Suitable rewards are given by the society for the men winning the first three places in this contest.

MOUNDBUILDER

Athens in Debate

In debate Athens has also been greatly interested; and she has sent out a majority of the members of the debate teams representing the College. In the last two years, however, the society has not maintained her record of former times in the number of men representing her in the inter-collegiate debate teams. But last year, Arthur Crookham, an Athenian, led the first College debate team, and this year Carl Schmidt, another Athenian, will represent Southwestern in both the Park and Ottawa debates. Vigorous steps have been taken to remedy the seeming backward step of the society in debate. A gold metal series of debates has been instituted, which are held on each Friday evening at the time of the regular program. Under this system much good debate material is being brought to the front, and every man is urged to take part in the contests. These debates do not alone assist the men in bringing glory to the society and Southwestern, but they also develop characteristics invaluable in after life.

Student Activities

Athenians are leaders in all lines of student activities. "The Collegian," the official College weekly paper has been published for eighteen years, and thirteen of eighteen editors have been men of Athens. She has furnished every editor for the last three years, Clarence Schroeder now holding that position. Every annual published in Southwestern has been edited by members of the Athenian Society. Guy Tetirick is editor of this year's annual, and Ray Muchmore, another Athenian, is manager.

By far the greater number of athletes come from Athenian ranks. It might be significant to mention some of the athletic positions held by members of the society during the present year. The captains of foot-ball, base-ball and basket-ball are all Athenians, as are also the managers of foot-ball and base-ball. The captain and manager of next year's foot-ball team have already been elected, and both are Athenians. Of the eighteen men who made the "S" in foot-ball this year, twelve were Athenians.

Athens has always played a very prominent part in the religious life of the school. For the past two years a majority of members of the College Gospel teams have been Athenians and the leaders of both teams this year are members of Athens. Most of the Southwestern graduates who are at work in the Mission Fields and in the ministry are old members of Athens.

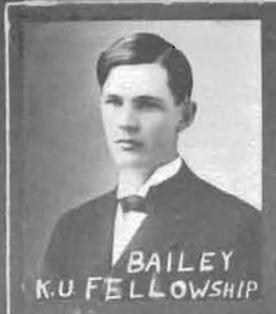

The standing of Athens in very high in the musical circles. Every man in the College orchestra is an Athenian, and she furnished her share of the members of the College Glee Club. Athens is the only Society in the College which has both a Glee Club and Orchestra of its own.

The Literary Program

However the most vital part of the work of the society is found in the regular public programs which are given on Friday night of each week. Each member of the society appears on the program once every three weeks, which fact allows him an unlimited means of self development. Much emphasis is placed upon the careful preparation of papers and literary productions, readings songs, speeches, and debates. The numbers must be submitted to a censor before they are allowed to appear on the program, and in the business meetings the attorney criticises all the members who appeared on the program. In this way especial help is given to each man. In connection with these programs, Athens, with the aid of her sister Belles Lettres, presents two or three standard dramas each year.

Athenian Ideals

One of the greatest inspirations to those who are now students of the College lies in the realization of the fact that two-thirds of the male graduates of Southwestern are, as old Athenians, watching their development with fraternal interest and affection, and are depending upon them to pass on to future generations the lofty ideals of the society. To out-distance her rivals in the College activities is not the greatest ambition of Athens, but it is her desire to turn out into the world members imbued with the old Athenian spirit, polished, practical and well-rounded men. Athens has ever taken as her ideal the loftiest cultural attainment to which a College man is able to rise; she has always striven to embody in her membership those qualities which characterize a representative college man. That Athens has succeeded, to some extent at least, in realizing these ideals is made manifest by the brilliant careers which so many of her Alumni are enjoying.

SOCIETY HISTORY

TWENTY-THREE years ago on January nineteenth, Southwestern's first literary society for young women was organized. Built upon a strong foundation by a group of strong leaders, Belles Lettres has ever striven to hold to that purpose for which she was founded, that of the highest possible development of womanhood—womanhood noble and pure and true, gracious and refined, a Christian womanhood, happy and proud to do her real share of the world's work. To-day, Belles Lettres rejoices in the realization of that ideal as she looks upon her membership of thoroughly normal, loyal, enthusiastic, all round, representative college women.

Since her very origin, Belles Lettres has proved herself an active and victorious participant in every college activity open to women. In debate, oratory, music, scholarship, athletics and life's real work, she has made herself strongly felt. In four of the intercollegiate debates between Southwestern and Fairmount, three of which S.C. won, Belles Lettres was represented. In 1909, in the only women's intersociety debate on record, she won the first four highest places out of six. In 1907, in the Prohibition contest, Belles Lettres won over all the college literary societies and took fourth place for Southwestern in the State contest. In 1910, she again won over all the home contestants and gained third place in the State contest. The four highest places in the three women's inter-society oratorical contests held, have been won by members of Belles Lettres. As dramatists, the members have shown ability thru the custom of presenting an annual Shakesperian play on May day—a custom which has become a part of the Spring program of the college. Musically, the Belles Lettres Glee Club, and Quartette, together with the Belles Lettres-Athenian College Orchestra represent some of the best musical talent in the school. Within the last five years, since Southwestern has been granting Kansas University scholarships, Belles Lettres has been represented once and in 1912, the first alternate was one of her members; five of her former members have become a part of the faculty of Southwestern. In athletics, Belles Lettres has taken honors, managerships and captaincies in basketball and championships in tennis. To see the real Belles Lettres at work, one has only to look where leadership and ability are demanded—four of our former members are in the mission field, one is a well known lecturer, while countless scores are successful teachers and happy home-makers, all working out together the ideals of the gold and white.

As a means of training the intellectual life of her members and cultivating ease and grace in public performance, Belles Lettres meets for a literary program every Thursday evening. Here her members present essays, music, debates, readings and poems, combining the best serious literary effort always with fund of humor. After the open literary program, the members meet in a closed business meeting where great benefit is derived thru helpful criticism—suggestions from the best efforts of others, and training in parliamentary drill. The real value of these weekly literary programs, consists in the fact that each member prepares once a month a production which must be given before the public—hence her highest effort is put forth. All this leads to the development of leaders for every phase of college life—workers in Y. W. C. A., on the Collegian and Moundbuilder staffs as well as for the after more practical world demands.

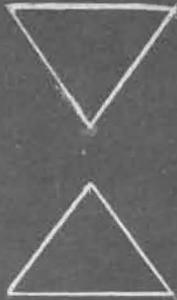

Next to her intellectual and literary training, Belles Lettres splendidly develops the social nature of her members. Picnics, frolics and "initiation stunts" in the Fall and the more formal reception and banquet in the spring make the ascetic woman impossible. The crowning event of the year, however, is the annual May Day Festival. Athens opens the day with a May morning breakfast in the park; in the afternoon the outdoor fete begins with processional, play, crowning of the queen, and chorus, ending in the May-pole dance. At night the festival closes with the annual Shakesperian May-Day play and chorus. Another event delightfully looked forward to is the Annual Home Coming of "Old Belles." At that time, the out-of-school members take charge of the evening and charmingly review the society's early days—their traditions, their struggles, their achievements and good times.

All these events, the evenings spent in intellectual development, in business procedure, contest achievement, the happy hours of frolics, receptions and banquets, the festival season, play and song serve to bind together in a strong bond of unity and fellowship every member of Belles Lettres and cause each wearer of the "Gold and White" to look upon these spots of her college days as among her very happiest and brightest.—N. E. R.

Ere yet the gods had taken flight, they gathered all the golden light
Which lingers where the gods may dwell and welded it into a bell;
And all the gladness earth had known, they wove into the gold bell's tone
And then,—because no name was better—
They named thee, oh beloved, Belles Lettres.—C. V.

SOCIETY HISTORY

HISTORICAL.—Thirteen years ago a number of men in Southwestern decided that in order to secure the greatest benefits to be derived from literary work a larger field should be provided, competition encouraged and opportunity afforded for greater literary advantages. Accordingly a new Literary Society was organized, christened "Delphi," and the doors opened to worthy young men who attended Southwestern, irrespective of educational ranking. That the enterprise has been successful is shown by the fact that Southwestern College now stands at the head of Kansas Colleges in Debate and Oratory, a great part of the credit for which must be given to the spirit of intense competition that has been fostered by the organization and subsequent labors of Delphi. Two years ago Collegiate ranking was made necessary for eligibility to membership in this society. Through many discouragements and over many obstacles, Delphi has forged her way to the front rank and is now one of the most potent factors in Southwestern's literary life.

LITERARY.—Regular literary programs are rendered each Friday evening of the school year. The audiences pack the hall and never leave in disappointment. Special stress is laid upon debate, there being one at each regular program. Readings, music, original papers and discussions are of the very highest order.

ORATORY.—In oratory Delphi has a record difficult to excel. Handicapped by her immaturity, the struggle was hard, but patience and persistence have been coupled with talent, and during the last three years, Delphi has won first place in three of the five collegiate contests.

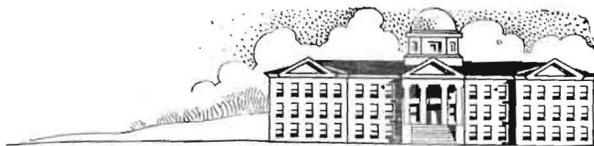

DEBATE.—The debate record is better even than that of oratory. Eighty-five per cent of the men who have led College debate teams have been Delphians. Of the twelve men composing the College debate teams for the years 1911-12 and 1912-13, ten have been Delphians; and the Intercollegiate debates have hitherto been won by Southwestern's teams. Well may Delphians be proud of the debate record.

MUSIC.—With the Oratory and Debate records stands the record for producing excellent musical talent. The Glee Club is a most popular organization and the joint recitals given by the Delphian and Sigma Glee Clubs are always enjoyed by large and enthusiastic audiences. For several years past the College quartettes have been chosen from Delphian material and the Southwest Kansas public can speak for the popularity of this organization as well as of its effectiveness.

SOCIAL.—Informal receptions through the year and the annual Delphian banquet in May, give development to the social side of the student and afford him opportunity for many hours of pleasant and beneficial recreation.

THE DELPHIAN HOME.—Should some Charter Member of Delphi drop in on a Friday evening he would feel that the home of the Delphians was more attractive than any picture his imagination had painted. From the early meeting-place of very primitive furnishings, the society has come to occupy a hall in joint ownership with its sister society, Sigma Pi Phi, decorated in oil and stencil work, fitted with handsome brass electric fixtures, carpeted with Wilton velvet, and furnished with massive quarter-sawed golden oak. The emblems of Delphi and Sigma Pi Phi are beautifully portrayed upon the front wall. The furnishings represent an outlay of one thousand dollars, all of which is paid. Competent critics have pronounced this the most beautiful society hall of their acquaintance.—A. T. M.

HISTORY AND ACTIVITIES

SIGMA PI PHI Literary Society stands for all that is wholesome in womanhood. Environment means much in the life of any young woman at home or abroad. Especially is this necessary to the college woman, away from home, perhaps for the first time. Sigma gives this needed environment to the woman who takes her pledge of Friendship, Loyalty and Learning. Her spirit is one of fairness and helpfulness; of friendship and loyalty; of learning and scholarship. Sigma girls are found in all the activities of the school. She has sent many out into the great world's work as teachers, missionaries, Y. W. C. A. secretaries and home-makers.

Sigma is only eight years old, but those eight years have been years of remarkable growth. She is full of the life and vigor of youth. While proud of her past history, for many victories and honors have come to her, she emphasizes the present and future. The past is gone and she lives only in the present and her futurity.

The frolic given for the new girls at the beginning of each Fall term of school, is one of the long remembered events. Sometimes this frolic is a hayrack ride to the home of some Sigma girl. Once it was a "hike" to Arkansas City; the last two years it has been a boatride, fun and feasting at Hiatt's Park and along the beautiful Walnut river.

Each year Sigma is at home to her brother society, Delphi. At this Annual Sigma-Delphian Reception her lovely and artistically furnished society hall is transformed into a reception room. Every Spring the Sigma banquet is well attended. Many have declared her banquets to be the most original and unique of the season.

Sigma has an excellent record in athletics. This year a Sigma is captain of the girl's Basket Ball team, and the majority of the team are Sigmas. Last year the star playing was done by Olive Bray, Grace Rutledge, May Henninger, and Maude Vaughan. The Tennis Tournament was won last spring by Maude Vaughan.

One of the strong features of the society is the great amount of musical talent she possesses. For years there has been a Sigma Quartette. The last two years a strong Sigma Glee Club has made the literary programs still more attractive. One member of the Southwestern Trio, which has done such good work for the college, is a Sigma. Half of the Southwestern Girls' Glee Club is composed of members of this society. An annual custom has been established of having a joint musicale with Delphi. It is one of the big events of the year. Larger crowds have attended these musicales than any other entertainment given by the societies.

The literary work is, of course, emphasized more strongly than any other part of the society work. Timid and backward girls have learned, thru the literary work, how to give their own productions, story, essay, debate or reading, with an ease and grace little dreamed possible. One member, Claire Lewis, brought no little honor to the society thru her ability to speak fluently and to the point on Woman Suffrage. She spoke before large crowds not only in Winfield but in Arkansas City.

The leading part in the Junior play of 1912, "The Man of the Hour," was taken by Edna Yetter. The same honor has been repeated this year and Grace Rutledge leads out in "She Stoops to Conquer."

For two years a Sigma has been president of the Girls' Oratorical Association. Last Spring in the Inter-Society Contest, Sigma received first in thought and composition. In the final ranking Edna Bement received second place and Olive Bray third.

Christian work is not slighted by the society. Her members are active workers in church, Sunday School, Epworth League and Y. W. C. A. work. This year, one of her members, Mabel Kanaga, is president of the Young Women's Christian Association.

Two years ago Sigma became a college society; no young woman, unless she has finished the High School course, can become a follower of the "Green and White." This has raised her previous high standard to one unexcelled in the school. Sigma is proud of her past attainments, but she is eager for new victories. She is anxious to welcome others that she may help them, and that they may bring new laurels to her, to Southwestern, and to womanhood.—MAK.

WEBSTER LITERARY SOCIETY

Is there any student activity to which we are more indebted than to the literary society? We think not. Surely no event in the history of the Academy has had a more far-reaching influence than the organization of Webster Literary Society, on February 17, 1910.

Prior to this time, the College societies had been admitting Academy men to membership. But the two societies were altogether unable to give so many men of such variegated classification the literary development so much needed. Further, many of the Academy were not availing themselves of even the opportunities offered, because of the "out-of-our-class feeling," so common to beginners in this work.

It was for the purpose of giving these students a "class of their own" that Webster was organized. And yet in her infancy, she has outstripped even the greatest hopes of her most optimistic Charter members.

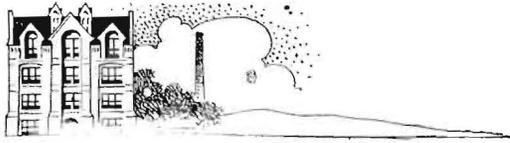

Not a single man of the new society had any previous literary training. So it was with an absolutely "green" crew that Webster embarked on the turbulent sea of College activity. Her cabin for the first Winter's cruise was the old mathematics room in North Hall. Here gathered round her tables, such headliners as "Curley" Vaughan, "Spider" Hayes, "Toughy" Hodges, "Doc" Gibson, and David Starr "Hank" Jordan.

Great interest was manifested from the start in debate. And with competition she has waxed strong. While not so successful in the first Inter-society debate, she has obtained her share of the honors this year, Messrs. Littell, Salser, and Stansbury obtaining high places on the debate squad. In Athletics she has been even more than successful.

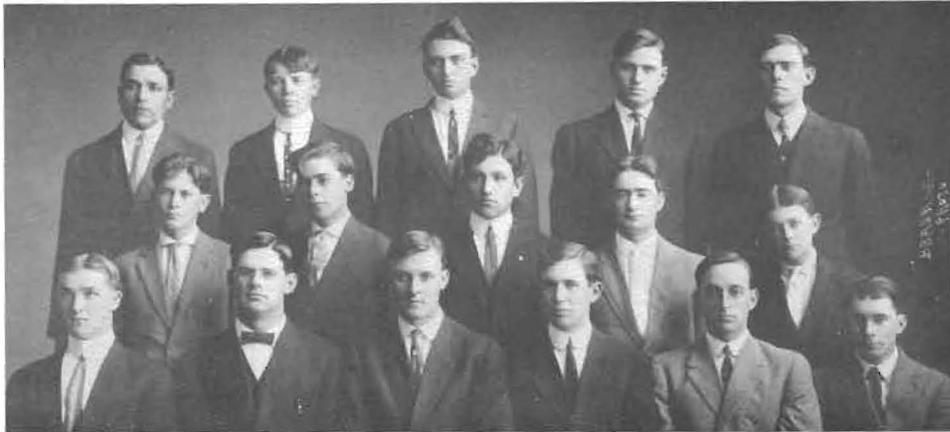

At present Webster holds session in the old Athenian hall, North Hall. It has been remodeled and neatly furnished by the society. The programs given compare favorably with those of the older societies, and many visitors are in regular attendance.

SEEING the need of an Academy literary society in Southwestern, several literary enthusiasts were instrumental in the organization of a society. On October 1, 1910, Ionia was organized with twenty-seven charter members.

The purpose of its organization was to provide literary training then denied the Academy by College societies. This society was established to promote good fellowship, to maintain lofty ideals of character, to quicken the literary interest, and to provide those who enter college with a sound literary training.

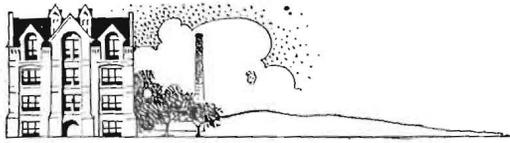

From the beginning the work of the society has been excellent; the programs will compare favorably with the College societies. The record which Ionia has made during her three years, shows the splendid ability of her twenty-seven members. The Academy debate team has been composed of men from this society since its organization. For the past two years the Academy was represented in debate by Baker, White, and Phelps against Wellington High School and O. B. C. Academy of Blackwell. One of these men is now a representative on the college debate team. On January 13, 1913 at the preliminary debate between the two societies, Ionia placed three men. Two of these men were chosen members of the first team, Heibsch and Carlisle taking first and third; while McInnes secured a position on the debate squad. In oratory the Society was represented in the Prohibition contest in 1912 by Barnstable, and in 1913 by Stocking. In these contests Ionia shows a progressive spirit, and she is justly proud of the high standard of work done by her members. In social activities Ionia is prominent; each Fall the Society gives a reception to Sun Areta.

Ionia has prospered; she has set the pace and is still leading. A great future opens up before her. Surely an organization that has climbed so rapidly will not fail. If we judge the future by the past, Ionia is destined to make a brilliant record.

SUN ARETA LITERARY SOCIETY

SO this is Sun Areta? Yes, we girls of the Academy had long wished for, and felt the need of a literary society for only Academy girls, but it was not until the Spring of 1911 that our desire was obtained. It was then that Sun Areta was organized; it was then that real progress in literary work began for the girls of the Academy; and it is in Sun Areta that her members are receiving a training in responsibility that would be almost impossible to obtain in a society where there are so many other girls better fitted to do the work of the society, as there are in the College organizations.

As for a sister society, Sun Areta has none to compete with, but she justly prides herself because of the fact that she has two brother societies in whom she has great confidence.

THE YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

THE Young Women's Christian Association is one of the strongest institutions in the school. No other organization is more potent in the formation of character; no influence more vital in developing wellrounded, capable, Christian women. The Association at Southwestern is one of the three strongest in the State. A large per cent of the women in the school are members and do active Christian work.

The work of the Y. W. C. A. is fourfold, dealing with the physical, the intellectual, the social and spiritual development of the women. Every year at the beginning of school, Y. W. C. A. girls meet the trains, and help the girls find their rooming and boarding places. The first Saturday night an informal reception is held in the Y. W. C. A. House for all the girls of the school. Here the new girls feel very much at home and soon forget how homesick they were.

Every Sunday afternoon at 2:15, the girls meet together in Association Hall or Grace Church for their devotional service. Usually some member of the Association leads, altho' women of the town, strong women of the adjoining cities and faculty members sometimes, lead. The talks are always practical and deeply spiritual.

The Bible and Mission courses offered during the year are interesting, helpful, and well attended. This year a Mission Study Lecture Course was a strong feature and proved to be quite popular.

Each June the Association sends some of its members to the Summer Conference of the Y. W. C. A. at Cascade, Colorado. Last year Lena Lowrance, Susie Greve, Carrie Carlisle, Edna Bement, Olive Bray and Pearl Schroeder attended. Next Summer the Conference is to be held in Estes, Park, Colorado, and we are hoping a large number of girls will go, for those who do always return filled with enthusiasm over the work.

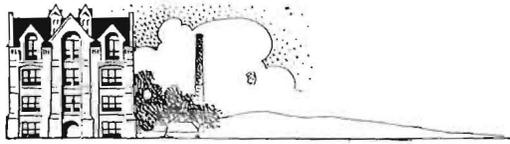

A cabinet of ten girls is at the head of the work. Always these ten girls are leaders in the social, physical and intellectual activities of the school as well as in the spiritual. They are a faithful, loyal lot of girls, who together with more than one hundred others, try to glorify Christ's cause.

"I came that ye might have life, and that ye might have it more abundantly." is the motto, and the aim is to bring every girl in school into personal relationship with her Christ.

THE YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

THE vision of the Y. M. C. A. founders, that Christ was a virile man, that Christianity is a man's religion, and that religion thrives only in a strong body as well as in a strong mind, is being realized to-day. From this pioneer teaching of the Y. M. C. A. the idea of the Symmetrical Man has been inculcated into our religion.

True to these conceptions has the standard of our Association been upheld. So true is this that it is the exception to see a man who is not so developing himself. Christianity in Southwestern is being promulgated in a quiet yet powerful manner by our Y. M. C. A. Truly no insincerity or prejudice hampers the highest achievements. The Hi-Ki and the We-Wi blend into a vigorous chorus singing, "Take Time to be Holy," that enthuses as effectively as do our yells.

The speakers for our Sunday afternoon meetings bring their messages from every field of activity with an enthusiasm that we feel genuine. The big vital work of the Association is in harmonizing with the Church in their efforts in rallying men for the Christ Life. Direct Deputation work is carried on in the advanced and progressive idea of Gospel Teams. The personnel of the members of these teams one finds to be prominent men in every school activity. That Christianity is vital and dear to men of athletic, business and scholarly turn adds to the efficiency of this work.

An idea of the farther work of the Y. M. in the school life is suggested by the various committees. The Social affairs, such as Stag Social, Joint-Reception, Mid-year Banquet, infuse the healthy and high Southwestern ideals into our Social Life, and moulds this phase of the individual to harmonize in the structure of the Four-square man. Bible Study, vital to the Spiritual life of every man, has a prominent place. Y. M. C. A. Conventions are inestimable in their influence for bringing fellows to know the world's work, and to cause men to analyze themselves for their place in this work. The Y-M House, the most popular Rooming and Boarding place on the Hill, is a center for Social and Religious activities.

No man, we feel, can take Y. M. through his college Course and go out to fail in life. For when the game is over, the score recorded, the excitement subsided, and only the training and memory of our college life is left, among the dearest and truest will be the high Christian Ideals, the ennobling Meetings, and the lasting Friendships of the Y. M.

STUDENT VOLUNTEERS

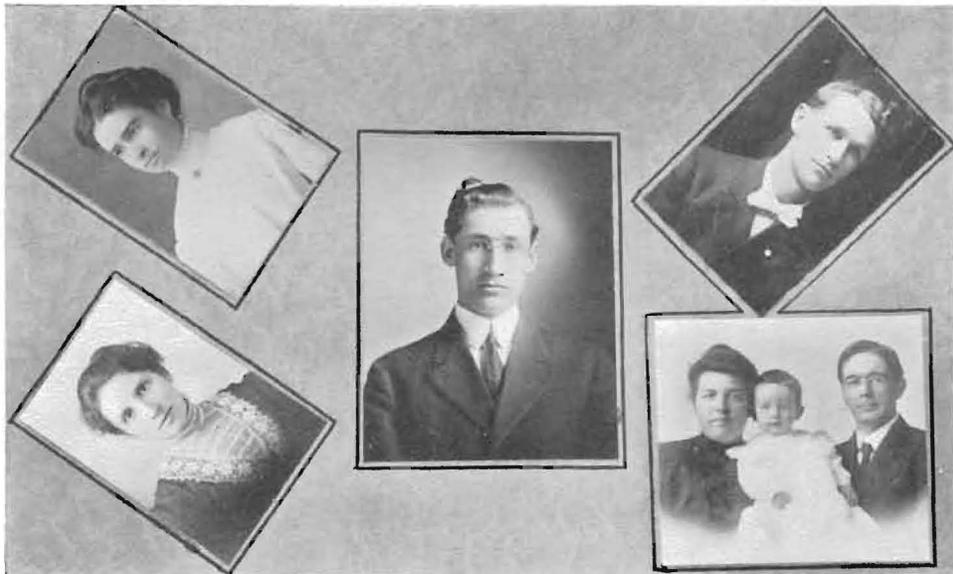

HE Student Volunteer Band of Southwestern was organized in 1901 with six members. Since then nineteen have gone from the College as missionaries to India, Malaysia and the Phillipine Islands. The Foreign Field is calling for the best America has and Southwestern is recognized as one of the greatest recruiting stations.

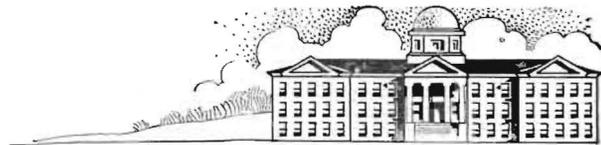

Student Volunteer Bands are found in most of the colleges of North America, and their purpose is to arouse missionary enthusiasm, encouraging students to declare it their purpose to become Foreign Missionaries. Surely there is no greater work for the students of Southwestern than to carry the gospel of Jesus Christ to the millions who have not yet heard the good news.

Once in four years a World's Student Volunteer Convention is held. Each year Kansas holds a State Conference.

The motto is "The Evangelization of the World in This Generation." O. A. '13.

THE MEN'S CONFERENCE

ON the evening of September 11, 1911, the men of Southwestern met together in a mass meeting for the purpose of perfecting an organization to promote the highest New Testament standard of living, and for developing the greatest efficiency in Christian service. Beginning with a membership of thirty it has in the short time since its organization increased its enrollment to sixty-seven men.

There are in Southwestern College fourteen student pastors, who have regular charges and preach each Sunday. Each one of these pastors belongs to the Men's Conference. Besides these student pastors there are a number of other men who act as supplies in case of a vacancy in regular pastorates.

The Conference has a Missionary Committee whose duty it is to find unoccupied territory for conducting religious services, and to send men from the Conference, by the approval of the President and faculty, to conduct such service in these fields. As a result of this work some of these men have organized classes, and now hold regular services each Sunday.

The Conference has come to be recognized as a vital and real factor in the development of the spiritual life of the institution.

THE STUDENT COUNCIL

FOR a long time Southwestern had felt the need of an organization which would permit some degree of self government to the student body, and at the same time act as a connecting link between that body and the Faculty. In the year 1911, after several months of agitating, discussing and planning, the idea was formulated in the present constitution, being approved by the Faculty and Board of Trustees. As stated in the constitution, "the object of the Student Council shall be to have advisory relationship to the Faculty with respect to all student enterprises, organizations and activities; to act as a Board of Arbitration between students and organizations of students, and to take the initiative in such matters as the Council may deem necessary." Although a comparatively new organization, the Student Council has already proved itself to be a highly successful body, handling with great efficiency all questions concerning athletics, social affairs, classwork, debate, oratory, student conduct and almost every other phase of college activity. The personell of the Council is thoroughly representative, consisting of two members from each of the four College classes, one each from the four Academy Classes and one each from the departments of Music, Oratory and Business. The presiding officer is the chairman of the Faculty Committee on Administration, at present, Professor J. F. Phillips, who transmits those proceedings of the Student Council which regard the Faculty to that body. The Council meets in regular business session every second Tuesday of the collegiate year, and publishes from time to time those actions which are of concern to the student public.

One of the first and most important responsibilities which the Student Council undertook was that of assuming the apportionment of the student enterprise fund, a power formerly exercised by the Faculty Committee on Administration. By means of this change the representatives of the students themselves decide just how their fees shall be divided among the various associations, hold the heads of such organizations accountable for every expenditure, audit all books and investigate financial claims presented.

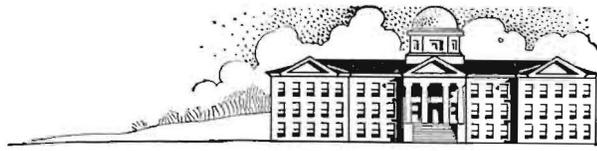

This year the matter of scholarship, student conduct and honesty in class work has come largely under the supervision of the Student Council. At present, extensive inquiries are being made into the matter of class grades which will furnish valuable data for future definite action. At times rumors have been afloat as to the unfairness of certain students in term examinations and daily class recitations. Accordingly, the council drew up a splendid code of rules, which takes that matter entirely in the hands of the students themselves. Since that action, all trouble has subsided and no occasion has arisen whatever for the Council to intervene in any such situation. The Council has provided for a standing committee to act in conjunction with that of the Faculty on the religious and social life of the institutions. Together they hold supervision over conduct, amusements, chaperones, social hours and co-operate directly with the students themselves.

The further enumeration of a few items of work which the Council has affected this year may serve to give a better idea of the diversity of matters which this organization considers. Uniform dates have been selected for the election of all class officers and Student Council representatives; the time also prescribed for the elections of all athletic managers, oratory, debate and prohibition leaders; the classification of all irregular students has been defined, subject in all cases to the Registrar's approval. The Council has assumed all authority to grant awards, honors and medals in all student contests; has had recommended plans for the annual Freshmen and Sophomore "scrap;" selected the time for Campus Day and directed its plan of operation; has published a student's handbook concerning the chief organizations of the College; has made investigations into the matter of society banquet expenses; has recommended that all Freshmen classes adopt the custom of appearing in caps at stated seasons; has created a wholesome sentiment in regard to student concern of the institution's property; and, in a word, has brought to the realization of the students that the College is entirely what they themselves wish it to be.

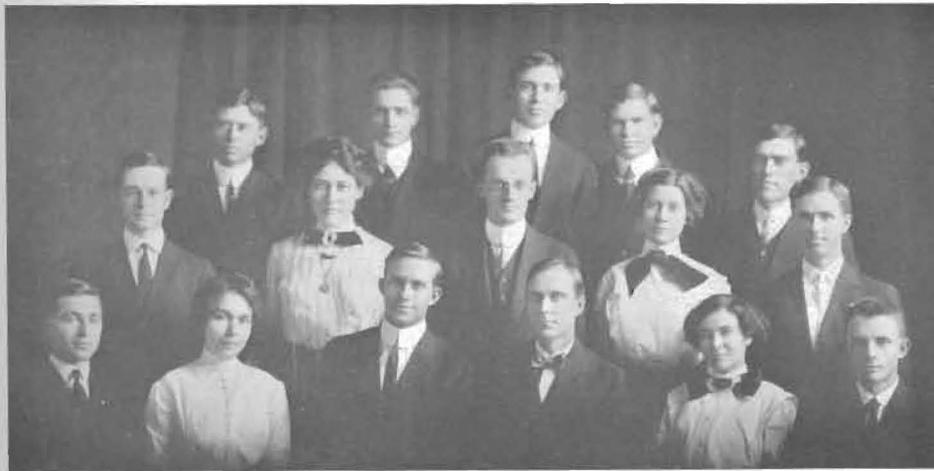

Great hopes are based upon the work which the Council has already done, and all plans for future effort are centered upon the one idea of making the College a greater, stronger and truer one for every young man and woman of the Southwest Kansas Conference.

THE ROOTER'S CLUB

THE Rooter's Club was organized in 1910 by a group of Southwestern lung-busting artists. Every man, woman, or faculty member connected with the above mentioned institution, who were interested in developing their respiratory organs in a more scientific and systematic manner were invited to join the organization.

Since that time the Club has developed until it has become one of the dominant factors in all intercollegiate activities. The beaming features of its little president, Warren Stevick, upon the chapel platform is always a pleasing assurance to its members that they will be given an opportunity to uncork some of their pent-up enthusiasm.

One branch of the Club which deserves special mention is the Loyal One Hundred, composed of men in the more advanced stages of college spirit. These martyrs have religiously promised, during the progress of athletic games, to deprive themselves of all feminine charms at the bidding of the yell leaders, and to follow where they are led. Such devotion to their Alma Mater is indeed touching. It is this loyal body of students, who have stood on the side lines and so faithfully lent their support to the teams that Southwestern owes much of the success of this year's football season, the greatest the college has ever known.

One of the things of which the Rooter's Club is especially proud is the little intercollegiate cemetery, in whose shallow graves repose the bones of Southwestern's defeated rivals. This year, already many new graves have appeared on the hillside, and ere the young Spring has departed, it is expected that several others will here be laid to rest, victims of Southwestern's forensic and athletic prowess.

The Club has done more this year than presenting its traditional snake dances and night-shirt parades. It has raised one-hundred and fifty dollars for the purchasing of warm blankets, with which to protect Southwestern's athletes from the cold Kansas winds.

That the Rooter's Club of Southwestern is a live and hustling organization is proven by the fact that Southwestern's forensic and athletic teams are famed to receive better support than the teams of any other college in the State.

ORATORICAL ASSOCIATION

TWENTY-ONE years ago Southwestern sent her first orator to the State contest. Every minute since that time the Oratorical Association has been a live, active organization, and one of the strongest in our college.

In 1912 the Association allowed itself to be a trifle outdistanced by the Prohibition League both in number of orators and in amount of prize money, but this was due to no decadence of power on the part of the former.

In the 1912 contest three Delphians and four Athenians ranging in classification from Freshmen to Senior, tried for places. A very spirited, yet friendly and considerate rivalry was manifested by these societies toward each other. Athens secured first and third places, and Delphi was awarded second place.

The 1913 contest was one of the best that has ever been held. Most of the students were looking for one of the "veterans," Stevick or Groom, to walk off with first and second places, but all were very much surprised when Carl Carlson presented a subject dear to the heart of every Swede in his oration, "Gustavus Adolphus." There was no doubt about it—"Ole" walked off with first place. Warren Stevick took second with the oration "The Crucible," while Fuller Groom received third place with the subject "Robert E. Lee, Patriot or Traitor."

Southwestern's State record is an enviable one. Few times has she touched bottom. She has been awarded: Three firsts, two seconds, four thirds, five fourths, four fifths, one sixth and two eights.

PROHIBITION LEAGUE

AFTER allowing a year to pass without sending a representative orator to the State Contest, the local league awoke with renewed vigor in 1912. The local contest was the largest in the history of Southwestern, eight men competing. In fact our College had more contestants and better prizes than any other College in the State. The home contest was held on January 23, 1912, in the chapel at Richardson Hall. J. Fuller Groom was ranked first by the judges with his oration, "Kansas, For America's Sake." Howard Finley took second place with the oration, "Progress and the Liquor Traffic;" while Glen Wycoff received third place with, "Kansas, a Nation's Hope."

In this year's contest held on January 14, Mr. Finley took first place with his oration "Law Enforcement, the Need of Prohibition;" While Mr. Roy Templin received second place with the subject, "Intemperance, the Menace of Modern Civilization." With Mr. Finley as the representative orator of our Prohibition League, we are confident that we are going to be as well represented as we were by Lewis Simes, local winner in 1909, who successfully went thru the State and Interstate contests and was awarded second place in the National contest. Already Southwestern has bared her brow to receive the crowns of victory which her mighty orator is sure to bring home to her. The Interstate contest is to be held here at Southwestern in May and we are quite confident that the Kansas representative will be our own "Red Rambler."

COLLEGE GIRL'S ORATORICAL ASSOCIATION

IN 1912 the Girl's Oratorical Association became a real College organization with a definite constitution and a force of officers. Although two contests had been previously held, the whole arrangement was unstable and the governing rules were uncertain and inadequate. Since its permanent organization, the association bids fair to become one of the strongest organizations of our school.

During the past few months the girls have been working hard for an intercollegiate contest. Despite their efforts it seems that they are to be disappointed this year, for few if any of the other colleges favor the plan. The splendid work which our girls are doing in oratory enables us to prophesy with certainty that the day is near at hand when we will have a Girls' State Oratorical Association. We are glad to know that Southwestern girls are the pioneers in the move looking toward that end.

Up to this time the Belles have always carried off first honors. For the first two years Iola Winner took the first prizes, and last year Hattie Halverstadt, one of our Junior girls added another Belles victory to the list.

The girls are now preparing for their fourth annual contest. A lively contest is assured. Probably three Belles and three Sigmas will compete for honors.

THE PROGRESSIVE CLUB

THE common belief that college students take little or no interest in politics has certainly been disproved in Southwestern. Of the four political organizations in the college, the Progressive Club has the largest membership. We say 'has' because it is still an active force preparing itself for future frays. The largest political meeting held in Winfield during the last campaign, with the exception of the one addressed by Mr. Bryan, was held under the auspices of the club. Other meetings were addressed by members of the club, and while making no pretenses as orators, yet by the earnestness of the appeal many new recruits were added to the ranks.

—J. W. S. '14.

THE WILSON CLUB

WHY not have a Wilson Club?" those loyal to the Democratic faith asked each other, during the opening days of school last Fall. Because of its reiteration and the deeply felt need thereof, the idea grew and culminated, on the 3rd of October, in the organization of the "Woodrow Wilson Club of Southwestern." About fifty men were present at the organization.

Wofford Timmons was elected President; Henry Jordan, Secretary; and Paul Stevick, Treasurer. Committees were appointed to carry on an aggressive campaign. Nine days later, the loyal girls, who had meanwhile organized a club of their own, were incorporated in the club, with the question of equal suffrage dropped. At a downtown meeting the club gave an exposition of its view to the people of the city. And thus the campaign went on.

That the organization was not a mere temporary affair was evidenced when Timmons and Stevick were sent to Topeka to participate in the formation of a federation of the Democratic clubs of the Colleges of Kansas. Timmons was elected treasurer.

That their candidate won has not been the greatest result of the existence of this Club. For an influential group of college students, long reproached for their indifference in political affairs, have demonstrated their ability to learn the duties of good citizenship.

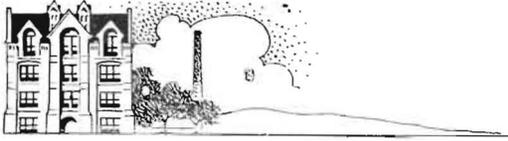

—H. W. '16.

THE WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE CLUB

THE Women's Suffrage Club was organized on October ninth and the following officers were elected: President, Leila Swarts; Secretary, Mabel Kanaga; and Treasurer, Ethel Delaney. The purpose of the club was to assist in the campaign to secure the ballot for women. A number of weekly meetings were held, and interesting talks given by Miss Race, Miss Cady and the members. Buttons with "Votes for Women" were worn by the members and those converted to the belief. A table also was placed in the library and kept supplied with Suffrage literature. The Club Trio, composed of Eva Winfield, Margaret Rutan and Ethel Kellogg, was invited to sing at a large Suffrage mass meeting of the Winfield citizens and also at a similar meeting in Arkansas City. Claire Lewis spoke in behalf of Women's Suffrage at both of these meetings and the trio and Miss Lewis were the most popular numbers of the program. The club numbered sixty girls of the school and justly feels proud of the part it played in the general movement for Suffrage in the city.

THE SOUTHWESTERN COUNTY CLUBS

THIS year saw the organization of two County Clubs in Southwestern. Those who hailed from the county of Pratt were the first to get their club under way, and those from Rice county soon followed.

The formation of these clubs is not only to boost the interest of their Alma Mater in their home communities, but also for the purpose of having social times together during the school session.

This year these clubs presented their Country High Schools with large Southwestern banners, and the work they are doing in interesting prospective students to come to Southwestern insures the growth of the Clubs in the future. Because of the success of the County Clubs this year, very likely next fall will see the organization of several more.

First Place Oration in The 1912 State "Old Line"
Oratorical Contest

UPON a deathless page, the Stylus of History records the achievements of human endeavor, but alas too often it is held in the grasp of an erring hand. He who has heard the voices of thronging multitudes singing his merited praises may at last be painfully neglected because of unjust historians, while he who has acted but a trivial part in the drama of life may, through the hero-worship of a devoted follower, gain unceasing plaudits from the lips of the distant future.

In no period has this deplorable truth been more clearly proven, than in the Renaissance, which, like all other great epochs, has its towering leaders. We see in Petrarch the rock that stemmed the tide of religious dogmatism, and we confirm the decision of the centuries and name him "Father of Humanism." We gladly give to Savonarola our hearty applause for his heroic fight for higher morals in the face of a perfligate world. We marvel at the fertility of Dante's imagination. With him classical literature had a rebirth, and with the world we concede to him the Laurel of Literature. We glory in the godlike mind of Michael Angelo, where art was revived, and we hail as the Second Phidias. Only so far do historians endeavor to lead us. But why rest here as they would wish? Can we believe that, with the revival of learning and of morals, of literature and of art, the desire for better laws, in that age of extreme serfdom, should remain dormant? Tonight I stand here to present the stirring facts on which I base my plea that along with these illustrious precursors of the Renaissance there was an eminent, though renowned, Patron of Law, Nicola di Rienzi.

The dawn of the fourteenth century found an Italy far different from that of Caesar's. Her ancient glory had fallen to dust. The erstwhile strong and united Italy was torn into fragments that quivered in the clutch of merciless tyrants. Her beautiful hills were filled with great companies of German robbers at whose will States might stand to fall. But what of Rome, the mother of law, the throne of a world-empire? What of the Eternal City at whose altar the kingdoms of mighty monarchs laid down their souls in homage? We see her shorn of every vestige of her former power. She bows her once disdainful head in humiliating submission before the crowns of the world. The city was in the grasp of the barons, whose love for her was founded upon their desire to plunder. The populace was nothing more than a wild, ferocious mob, whose anger was as impotent against the strength of the barons, as the foaming waves of the ocean against the rocky cliffs. The Papal See, their last feeble protection, had slunk away to Avignon and the people, left like a flock without a shepherd, were but the prey of the wolfish greed of the barons.

Amid such scenes was Rienzi nurtured. His childhood was passed among Rome's dreamy ruins. His youth was spent in the study of her ancient historians, in drinking at the fountain of Cicero's eloquence, and in prayerful meditation over the words of the Bible. Glorving in the greatness of Rome's past, deploring the degradation of the present, and thrilled by the promises of God, Rienzi dreamed of a New Rome. He beheld a people in peace, their happiness secure under the rule of justice. A united Italy rose before him, ruled by Rome, the metropolis of the ancient world.

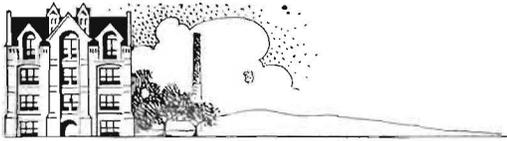

Nor was his vision only an idle dream. He toiled silently and faithfully to fit himself for the leadership of a revolution and to make himself equal to the task of government that was to fall on his own shoulders. With eloquence born of a lofty and noble purpose, he persuaded the people to resist the cruel nobles. Then by the strength of his mind and the magnetism of personality, he achieved that which in any country, in any age, by any man, is deemed almost as a miracle in the eyes of the world. He overthrew the entrenched power of a tyrannical government, without the flowing of a drop of blood. Then, true to his boyish visions, he re-established the days of the glorious republic. He gave to the people a code of laws that protected them from their oppressors. "Never, perhaps," writes the forceful pen of Gibbon, "has the energy and effect of a single mind been so remarkably felt as in the sudden reformation of Rome by the tribune Rienzi." The idle crowds of the streets once calling in vain for justice, dispersed themselves and went to their trades and farms. The highways once beset by robbers, became paths along which trains of valuable merchandise might pass in perfect security. The scene of strife and bloodshed was exchanged for one of peace and contentment. From national insignificance Rome leaped to an eminence demanding international applause. Out of social and political chaos was conducted a government founded upon the principle of the equality of man.

After revitalizing this idea of government, Rienzi wished to extend to others the blessing of liberty. Assembling the representatives of the States of Italy, he proclaimed to them, that which with us today is axiomatic, but which, until then, had slept undisturbed through the darkness of the mediaeval centuries. He declared it the right of his countrymen to choose him whom they wished to call their ruler. This statement shook like an earthquake the thrones of Europe. It disputed the right of the Emperor of the Holy Rome Empire to be chosen by the Electors of Germany. It utterly disregarded the pope, then struggling with the Teutons for temporal power over Italy. It was the awakening of the spirit of democracy. It set before the peoples of Western Europe the ideal for which they should strive. But with Rienzi this ideal died, to be resurrected centuries later by the bloody guillotine. His assertion of these rights caused his fall, but at the same time it proved to those that come after him, that his labors were not for himself, but for the advancement of all humanity.

Torn from his place by a ban of excommunication; driven before the winds of adversity, from cloister to court, from court to papal prison; oppressed by the jealousy of man, Rienzi wandered for years from his native home. Then hewing his path through adamantine obstructions he returned to Rome released from the curse of the pope. Again he was given the reins of power, and again he reconstructed the state. Then to meet the cost of maintaining the government he levied a necessary tax, which, although just, in the fickle minds of the populace was the signal for an uprising within the city. These inconstant people, no longer merited the name of Romans, but thenceforth to be ever known as changeable Italians, turned upon him crying in their madness, "Perish—he who made the impost."

Historians accuse Rienzi of being proud and full of vanity. Admitting such to be the case, we concede nothing that should despoil him of any part of his honor. Washington maintained the atmosphere of a royal court, but this is forgotten in the love borne him for his service to his country. If Rienzi was fanatic, then also was that master of men, Oliver Cromwell. If he sought fame and self-aggrandizement, then why did he not shape the government into a despotism? They say he was a cruel tyrant, and yet they cannot show a single deed of violence that was not indispensable in that disordered age for the maintenance of justice.

The Italy of the present is the child of violence. Born amid the thunder of battle, she was christened in the fratricidal blood, and today is sustained by the regnancy of a sheathless sword. The course of Rienzi's actions pointed to a volitional union, it was consummated by conquering armies; he projected a government maintained in the interest of the people, behold a dissatisfied populace bowed with taxes to the fourth of their income; his was a national policy of internal achievement, behold the burdening navy, and the unjustifiable war for the sandy wastes of Tripoli. In the face of these actualities we cannot for a moment deny the state craft of Rienzi—the modernist of the Mediaeval Ages.

Rienzi is one of those men that live many centuries before their time. He is one of those who lay down their lives for the planting of some great principle that does not blossom and bear fruit until after long years of growth. He belongs to that hallowed group that receives curses for kindness, hatred for love, and death for sacrificing service. As Savonarola was a martyr to religion, so Rienzi was a martyr to the cause of the people, but his death lacked even the dignity of a state execution.

Behold him as he stands before that self-enraged mob, calm, steady, powerful. The cowardly minds are quelled before the eloquence of his majestical silence. If he but speaks, the tones of his voice shall quiet them as the song of a mother stills her peevish child. He speaks! but no; one demon more hellish than the rest stabs him to the heart. Then like the pent-up power of a mighty sea bursting its bounds, the seething mass of frenzied men surges to and fro over the prostrate form of their rejected leader, and hack his bleeding and lifeless body in horrible glee. We close our eyes upon the hideous sight, but the cries of the fiendish mob sicken us. We cover our ears to exclude the maniacal screams, but the throb of the rushing mass, and the jar of the burning walls of the capitol, as they fall in blackened ruins, cause us to flee to the banks of the tranquil Tiber, hoping for a soothing voice in the murmur of its song. But the scenes burned into our minds are too heinous to be forgotten. We look toward the city, and view a column of smoke ascending high into the heavens, as if in silent protest to God.

Thus Rienzi died; not by any whom he had wronged, but by those he loved, by those for whom he had labored all his life, by those for whom his fondest dreams had pictured the blessings of righteous laws. They killed him who was their only hope—the redeemer of their liberties. Yet because of this tragedy of ingratitude we are able more clearly to understand and appreciate the worth of this wonderful man. The fame of Julius Caesar is carved on the minds of every generation by the dagger of the ungrateful Brutus; the tender-hearted Joan of Arc is canonized by the ashes of a burning scaffold; the dominion of the thorn-crowned King of Galilee, universal in its sway, is established by the passion of the Cross.

So with sympathy for Rienzi's ill-timed and unmerited death, let us seat him by the side of Petrarch and Savonarola, let us place his name with Dante's and Michael Angelo's, for when the course of this blundering world is ended, the sun of Universal Knowledge shall rise radiantly, dispelling the gloom of things unknown. The darkened corners, that are now so full of shadows shall be pierced with light. The mist of all the ages shall be rolled away, and the map of time shall smoothly stretch before us, like a valley underneath a lofty hill. Then shall we know each deed as it was done each word as it was spoken, and each motive as it worked itself to life. Then shall we behold a peer among the leaders of the Renaissance, with wreaths of everlasting glory and eternal fame upon his noble brow, and him shall we in justice hail, "Nicoli di Rienzi, Patron of Law."

A Prayer

Dear Lord, I ask not wealth nor fame
Nor ease nor length of days,
Nor e'en the power to build a name
That every tongue shall praise.
But grant this prayer all else above—
For if you will you can—
Just fill my heart with that great love
That gave its life for man.

Paul Stevick—'13.

Faith

Pilgrim of misery and of woe,
Dweller in this world below,
Think not of the distant morrow,
Search not for the hidden sorrow.
With ceaselessly flowing tears,
Waste not all the fleeting years.
While in the dark alone you grope,
God lifts his shining torch of Hope.
Believe on Him, the deed is done—
Thy Course will be nobly run.

On Friday, March 29, 1912, Southwestern entertained the State Oratorical Association. Realizing that more than a decade would elapse before another State contest would be held in Winfield, the Local Association put forth its best efforts to care for the visitors. Delegates from other schools were met at the depots and brot to the Hill. Considerable enthusiasm was manifested by Southwestern students at chapel and for the first time that famous parody on "Michael Roy" was heard. After chapel the college editors met for a program and to transact business. The Oratorical Association held two meetings, transacting business and electing the following officers: Hassler of Baker, president, Shields of Ottawa, vice-president; and Hurd of Emporia, secretary-treasurer.

The students were busy thruout the day showing visitors the town and the school and in getting acquainted. At six-thirty the Local Association and the Collegian Staff gave a reception to visiting delegates in Association Hall. The room was tastefully decorated, a delightful two-course luncheon was served, and everybody had a jolly good time. The visitors expressed their delight at the royal entertainment which Southwestern had provided them thruout the day. Papers received later from the various schools voiced the same feeling. We, honestly, wanted to treat them right, for we knew what Finley would do to them that evening. We had the whole matter about mapped out as it happened: to-day we will entertain our visitors well and feed them bountifully; to-night we slaughter them in a humane manner and toll the bells a bit, and to-morrow we solemnly lay them to rest in the College graveyard, erect a suitable monument, and then drive away all sorrow by a good old-fashioned celebration.

About eight-thirty, after a good deal of spirited yelling and singing by Southwesterners and the delegations from the visiting schools, the big contest opened. Six orators, from Emporia, Ottawa, Washburn, Kansas Wesleyan, Bethany and Cooper, had the good fortune, if they cared to call it such, to try Mr. Finley's mettle. Among them he was easily first. This was especially true in delivery. He received six points, and his nearest competitor was given eleven points.

For the third time in her history Southwestern had won first place in the State Oratorical Contest. This joyful news flashed over town and set the bells to ringing, and bon-fires to blazing. On the next day school was dismissed and the day given over to unbounded rejoicing. But before the grand jubilee, the funeral had to be attended to. College dirges were sung, funeral orations delivered and the fond hopes of six colleges, ruthlessly slain by our little giant, were buried beneath a beautiful tombstone. These rites were followed by another of the famous parades. The procession was led by the drum corps and almost every student was in line.

HERE'S SURE ONE ON STEVICK

Winfield, Kansas, April 17, 1913.

Dear Dad:—

It is bully to spend the last term in school winding around as a fellow pleases. Haven't looked inside of a text for two weeks. I'll bet you didn't have the time I'm having when you were in your last term. There isn't anything in particular doing that I can write about, but you can take it from me, she sure is happening.

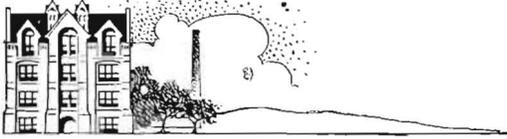

I about dropped the molasses jug of propriety when I appeared at the class dress-suit party. That fearfully wonderfully form of mine got its advertising. You know you met Schroeder, I vividly recall your opinion of him. Well, he is engaged, but the report is that he doesn't remember who he promised first. All three claim first.

That check for $80.00 received, it was a good turn on your part. Thanks. Here is an account of where it has gone:

The rest will soon go for room and board. You probably remember that S. O. G. means spent on girls. The three items at Rodocker's are to pay for three dozen photos I ordered. I thot one dozen would be enough; but every one who saw one wanted one, so I kept on ordering. They sure are larapin good ones. Rodocker does great work and makes the best out of the subject possible. The work on me was especially good. I look like a prince—in the picture. I'm out of money, but if I get another check I'll order an extra dozen and give you one. There isn't anything more to say, good-bye,

Your loving and respectful son,
WARREN.

To Algebra

While some in great and golden books may read
Of brave adventure in the stormy sea,
Of noble lives, of many a valorous deed,
Of some new thot, or quainter pleasantrie,
Or hear, by spirit ears, some ancient bard
Sing, thru the groves, a nation's woeful fate,
Or see, with inner eyes, the Autumn guard
Retreat before dull Winter's pompous state!
Unhappy me! though all around me stand
Those self-same books, whose beauties charm me most,
The only ships to that romantic land
Where dwell that old, but ever-living host,
Still must I toil, while thots within me vex,
Still I am bound (hard fate!) to finding X!

The Song of The Wind

In the song of the wind at night,
When the snow lies so cold and white,
I hear a sound of pines that moan
O'er mountain sides, where wild and lone
The Allamani camp fires burn
To light their chief a safe return.

In the song of the wind at night,
When the stars glisten far and bright,
The Druid's chant is whispered low
In awful accents blurred and slow
Thru those oak woods where palely lies
Their bleeding human sacrifice.

In the song of the wind at night,
Thru the dusk of the pale moon's light,
I hear the cry from the Tower room
Where the two princes met their doom;
And then the muffled roll of drums
Where bloody Richard's army comes.

In the song of the wind at night -
In the song of the wind at night,
Are all the sounds of gathered woe
Which all the earth shall ever know;
And thru the host-light of the snow
The ghosts of all the world do go.

My Life's Philosophy

Whenever troubles cross my way,
Or simple, would-be friends annoy,
When out of patience with the day,
I seek one moment full of joy,
And find it, smiling at a passer-by.

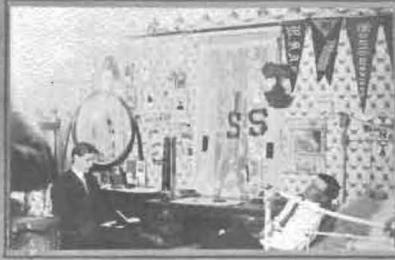

When on a sunny, balmy morn,
The whole day seems for sorrow bound,
With loads too heavy to be borne,
A whole day's joy for me is found
In simply smiling at a passer-by.

On New Year's morning all alone,
Reflecting on the old year's waste,
The thot came, "Why should I bemoan
The past, when daily I may taste
Of joy, in smiling at a passer-by?"

So hour by hour, and day by day,
And year by year, thru all my days,
I am resolved: that, since I may,
I'll make my paths all joyful ways
An do it, smiling at a passer-by.

Rena yawned "Oh, no!" she said "That's the clock we always call the visitor."

Clarence sat down again. "The visitor!" he remarked, "what a curious name to give a clock!"

Rena ventured an explanation. "You see," she cooed sweetly, "we call it that because we can never make it go!"

And even then Clarence failed to see the point.

Prexy (excitedly)—"Throw up the windows."

College Memories

Dear college days, so bright and fair
So filled with life and work and play,
Though sometimes marred by doubt or care
More often joyous, cheerful, gay;
For each day brot its given task,
Each evening saw some goal attained—
And what of joy need mortal ask
Save sense of growth and power?
Dear college days!

Old college songs! Upon the mind
Fond mem'ries crowd both thick and fast
On hearing those old songs, which bind
The spirit to the days long past.
We see once more the grand parade
Escort the conqu'ring heroes in,
Or hear the moonlight serenade
And tinkle of the mandolin.
Old college songs!

Dear college friends! Ah, magic word
That softens grief and lightens care.
Those friends our hearts' desires have heard
And learned our hopes and plans to share.
We knew them strong and brave and true;
We saw them grow from day to day
In power to see and will to do.
They still are ours though leagues away—
Dear college friends!

To a Kinglet

Sky half hid by sullen cloud,
Brook in crystal fetters fast,
Bare boughs shuddering in the blast,
Driven snow the pasture's shroud.

What is that the north winds bring—
Tiny form with stately mien,
Tunic white and mantle green?
Is't a courier from the king?

Eyes like jewels sparkling bright,
Voice as sweet as silver chimes,
Tuning to himself betimes,
"Who's thy liege, thou fairy sprite?"

Not a word the little elf
Deigns reply; but bending down,
Bows, and shows his golden crown.—
Ah! it is the King himself!

—Paul R. Stevick—'13.

Visionless

Weary and worn, at the end of the day,
He silently goes on his homeward way;
Nor cares he aught but for food and drink
And place of shelter, wherein to sink
Into sleep's oblivion.

The violet sweet and the primrose gay
Look up and smile as he goes their way;
But he only sees some colors bright,
For his soul is seared and dark as the night
Of his colorless life.

The mocking bird at break of day
Bids all the world to wake and pray;
But his heart is heavy and ears are dull,
For life to him is an empty hull
Of shadows dark.

The setting sun sends its golden rays
Filled with its message of hope and praise;
But dead it falls at the feet of him
Whose eye with the sordid has grown dim
And lusterless.

The night winds sigh and the breezes play,
And the myriad stars shine till the dawning
gray;
But heavy and listless, with eyes cast down,
He passeth at length to his grave, uncrowned
And visionless.

"Possumus Quia Posse Videmur"

We can, for we believe we can
Stand firm, endure, live out our plan.

We can, we will, we dare trust self—
To put life's best above mere self.

We can achieve our soul's desire,
And make to glow, the waning fire
Of high resolve, dim in doubt's mire.

We know no duty can be small,
For life's stern measure asks our all.

We only pause for play and rest,
That God may meed us Heaven's best.

Anna Greve (introducing Vera Hartenbower to Mrs. Greve)—“Mother, this is Vera.”
Mrs. Greve—“I am very glad to meet you Vera—What is your last name—Hutton? Well I never can remember it.”

President Mossman (concluding a short talk to Warren Hestwood)—“Go straight my boy, go straight.”

Warren (dubiously)—“Go straight to where?”

“Montie,” called Mrs. Cloud in the middle of the night. Montie snored a bit louder and turned over. “Montie,” she said with increased emphasis.

“What is it?” asked Montie.

“Get up! The gas is leaking,” said Mrs. Cloud.

“Aw, put a pan under it and come back to bed,” Montie replied.

A lady to Mrs. Latham—“I presume that you have a memento in that locket?”

Mrs. Latham—“Percisely; it is a lock of my husband’s hair?”

Lady—“But your husband isn’t leaving, is he?”

Mrs. Latham—No; but his hair is.

As Scott Would Now Write It

Breathes there a man with love so dead,
Who never to a maid hath said,
“I’d like to woo you if I may?”
Whose heart within him ne’er has fluttered
As unto her his love he uttered,
While strolling on their homeward way?
If such there breathe, go set it down,
For him no Charivari will sound.
Though many maidens beauty rare,
Dauntless love to man declare;
Despite leap year and all things else,
This proud admirer of himself,
Living, forfeits mother-in-law,
Dying without divorce of jaw,
Shall live his own eternal guest,
Unknown, unmarried, but in rest.

—Montie Cloud—’13.

The piano tuner had just been to Professor Gilson, and besides tuning the instrument, he polished the case with liquid veneer. Marjorie had had been watching him very attentively and when her father came she said, “Papa, the piano man was here, and what do you think he did? He went and put some hair tonic on the piano.”

Folsom Jackson (in regard to the college kitchen)—“One of us will have to get the license.”

Anna Greve—“You get the license and I will make arrangements for the rest.”

Ethel Graham’s father had kicked Bernstorff out of the house but he returned. “What!” cried Mr. Graham, amazed, “You here again?”

“Yes, sir,” answered the imperturbable Bernstorff, “I came to see if you couldn’t be induced to join our football team.”

Lucile Millspaugh (to Tetrick)—“Did you use all of those last lot of jokes I turned in for the Moundbuilder?”

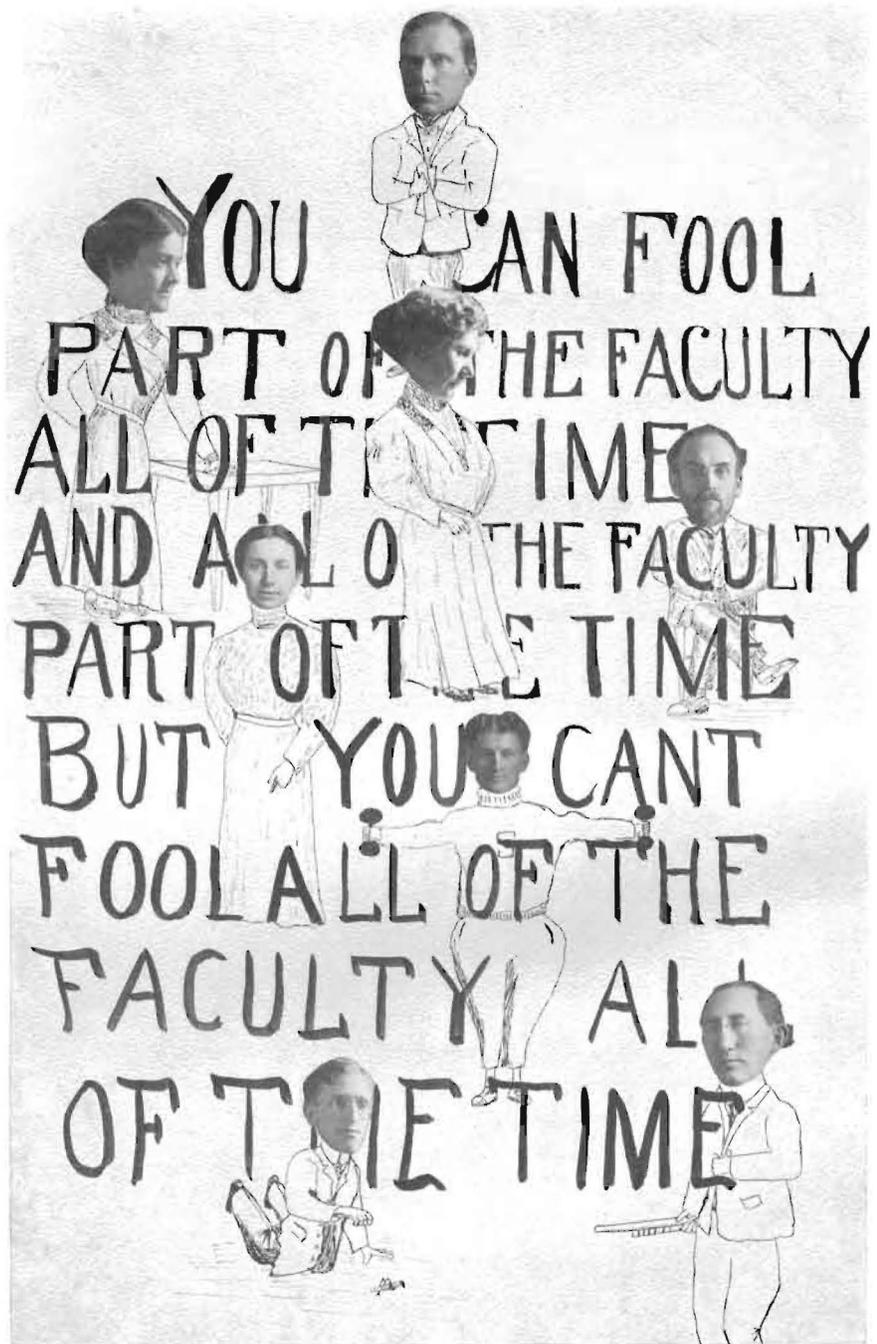

Tet—“Oh, yes. All that there was any point to.”

The First Sight

He stands and looks across eternal space
To that gray line where earth and heaven meet;
No spot of this had come to him, no place
He knew, no path, but hemmed in city street,
Where day by day with childish feet he crept.
Thru devil's court and sun-bespattered hall;
And never once his wistful gaze o'er-lept
The everlasting tier of wall on wall.
But now, (O, God, forgive that he should wait
So many a year for what we know so well!)
He sees with happy eyes the eternal state
Of nature roll before him like a spell;
He hears the rustling winds so swift and fleet,
He knows God's love; for earth and Heaven meet.

—Ruth Cady.

The Morning Star

Bright Cytherea, morning star!
How soft the golden ray,
As Phoebus mounts his shining car
At breaking of the day.

Thy lovely radiance fainter gleams
Anon—soon thou art gone;
O'ershadowed are thy mellow beams
In the splendor of the dawn.

—Paul Stevick—'13

The Cornfield

Have you ne'er passed thru a cornfield
On a bright and glorious morn—
While the dew was still a sparklin'
On the broad green blades of corn?
Saw the proud stalks all a standin'
Just like soldiers, don't you know,
With the roastin' ears all hangin'
'Bout a foot out from the row?

Then a gentle zephyr meets you
Bearing fragrance from the ears,
And the nodding stalks seem whispering,
"We are glad to see you, sirs."
Aye, we hold for you a burden
That's more precious than the gold
That has lain in yonder mountain
Since the time that men called old.

"For the grain has life within it
That the gold can never give.
Beasts can eat it, thrive and fatten,
Man can eat it, smile and live."
There are many kinds of music,—
Dramas, bands and orchestree—
But there's music in the cornfield
Which somehow appeals to me.

—Earl Thurber—'16

L'Envoi (Revised)

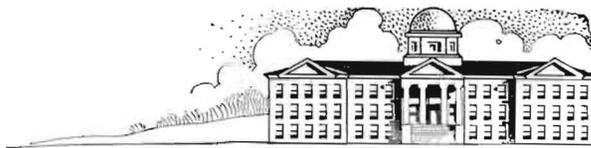

By Chas. Schrepel

When the last old maid has fainted,
And their tongues are twisted and tied,
When all their colors are faded, and
All their rats have died,
We shall rest, and faith, we shall need it—
We shall have peace for a spell,
Until the income of another leap year shall
Set them to work pellmell.

And those who win shall be happy;
They shall sit on the arm of his chair;
They will have great tales to tell him,
Of how they detest false hair.
And they will have great men to spoon with—
McKibben, Stevick and Votaw;
They will spoon for an age at a sitting
And never grow weary at all.

And those who lose will be jealous,
And those who lose shall blame,
But, they will keep on proposing
Until they are worn out and lame;
And each for the joy of getting a man,
She may call her own,
One who will fight life's battles for her,
So she need not go it alone.

The Playground

They talk nowadays of playgrounds
With their swings and other stuff.
With their bars and turnin' axles,
And teetertotters good enough.

But the old playground of my day
How different it does seem,
As I close my eyes and fancy
In the memory of a dream.

The vacant lot where we assembled,
And gathered few by few,
And played "old sow" and shinney,
Shot craps and marbles too.

How well do I remember
When Saturday would come,
Of work I had to finish
And other jobs to come.

The pounding music lesson,
How it bored me as a boy;
When I heard the fellows whistle,
My heart leaped up with joy.

When the tedious hour was o'er
And I grabbed my shinney stick,
I hastened thru the door
And made my journey quick.

For there upon the common
In the center of the mix,
Was the battered old tin can—
The "sow" of shinney sticks.

How we used to place in work-up,
And call three fingers square,
When across the bat top
Was drawn the vernier of a hair.

Oh, yes, we've evolutionized,
And populated so thick
That no vacant lot is found
To plant the shinney stick.

No director of the playgrounds
Had we then to superintend,
All our fights and boyish tussles;
It was Mother's voice then.

But boys are boys they say,
And each age lives the past anew;
So perhaps they'll not degenerate,
In the playground's motley crew.
—Guy C. Tetrick—'14.

SOUTHWESTERN

SOUTHWESTERN

Southwestern College now has a plant and endowment valued at $300,000; a plan is being launched to increase the latter to a quarter million. This is an evidence of the recognition of the worth of the College to the Southwest. In fact, Southwestern's alumni make good; 75% are active in professional life. Those now pursuing graduate or professional courses in Eastern universities are rated among the best. The final test of a college is its output.

Instruction is offered in the College of Liberal Arts and five associated schools: Academy, Oratory, Art, Music and Business. Southwestern affords the positive advantages of a small college. The Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. are very active; two gospel teams were sent out during the Christmas holidays. The literary societies are among the best in the state and are splendidly equipped. Southwestern's oratory and debate record is unsurpassed. Vigorous but clean athletics are encouraged. A system of practical (but not meddling) faculty oversight is maintained.

MOUNDBUILDER

COLLEGE

Southwestern is just closing its most successful year. The recent occupation of Richardson Hall (costing $70,000), the refurnishing of the laboratories and the enrichment of the library have added greatly to the ease and efficiency of college work. The department of Liberal Arts has had an increase of 15%; its Freshmen class numbers 82 and the Senior 28. The faculty, university trained, numbers 25, while the enrollment stands at 441—223 in the College of Liberal Arts. The "Southwestern spirit" is evident—intense, enthusiastic and sane.

Next year Southwestern College plans for still better things. The slogan "150 Freshmen," has been raised. No high-school senior will make a mistake in choosing Southwestern as his college. Over 60% of the students are self-supporting, than which there are no better. Where there's a will there's a way! The place for the child of the Christian home is in the Christian College. For information address the President,

FRANK E. MOSSMAN,

L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter

(Ball Bearing—Long Wearing)

In buying a typewriter you want a satisfactory answer to three questions:

What will it do for me?
How well will it do it?
How long will it do it?

By answering these queries with the needs of the typewriter owner and user in mind, the L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter Company has attained the front rank in the typewriter field.

Some people think that a typewriter is a typewriter and that is all there is to it. Machines may look alike but there is a lot of difference in efficiency.

The new Model Five is built not only for straight correspondence but for tabulating, billing and in fact for every service needed in the average business.

Its ball bearings at all points where friction develops through action, permit close adjustment and insure correct and accurate typewriting.

THE MENACE OF AMERICAN INSTITUTIONS

BY HOWARD FINLEY

The Kansas Oration in the Inter-State Prohibition Contest Winfield, Kansas, May 23, 1913

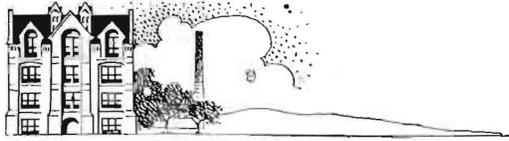

THE institutions that evolve in the upward toiling of races become the foundations of their societies. Upon their integrity to these organized principles of conduct depends the poise of their civilizations. Cleave from the American Indian the freedom of the thousand hills, and his tribes totter to extinction; filch from the Anglo-Saxon his respect for law, and his name will be known but to history.

To-day America is standing in a position fraught with jeopardy, waiting to ascertain whether her people will stand by their institutions, or whether an alien disregard for law will engulf her national character. Creeping in unawares, during the last quarter of a century, an unmistakable contempt for the law of the land has come upon us. This contempt has made itself evident in the insistent disrespect for the sacred edicts of the state, shown by the liquor interests. They have made prohibitory enactments a farce. Yet with hypocritical sorrow they lament the perversion of justice. They run up and down the land crying "Prohibition does not prohibit," and declare that in consequence all prohibitory laws should be repealed. They bewail with mock solicitude that laws not enforced provoke derision for the statutes of the state. True, the danger is ominous. Their analysis of the cause, however, is wretchedly erroneous. The trouble lies not in the laws, but in the inconsistent moral support rendered to them by the people.

The liquor powers stand unequivocally for the breaking of every prohibitory enactment written on the statute books of every state, county, and town in the land. They insolently fling from the editorial columns of their liquor journals the arrogant assertion that "no matter what laws may be made to cripple the beverage industries of our present time, they will not be observed by those managing these industries." They care not at present so much for the selling of their wares as for the weakening of the laws, in order that they may proclaim that prohibition will not produce the desired results. No love for their country dwells in their hearts; to them patriotism is an unknown emotion. Gold has usurped their affection. They do not fear the federal government for in their grasp they hold it as their slave.

The shame of every citizen should be the servility of American institutions to the will of the unscrupulous liquor interests. For twenty-seven per cent of its revenue, fearing a shortage of funds, the government at Washington has placed itself in the hands of the brewers. But behold a short-sighted and foolish policy: For money thus obtained comes in the end from the people and from a class least able to bear the burden of this enormous tax. Through the interstate commerce laws, the brewers have a bulwark of adamant strength against which the hosts of law enforcing citizens, must strive. In the passage of the Webb bill the federal government but inadequately met the great needs of prohibition in interstate commerce. This bill is a law that, as far as the national government is concerned, may be almost totally disrespected by the liquor interests; it is a law whose enforcement, left entirely to the individual states, will be most difficult. This act of the government at Washington was, Pilate-like, merely the closer drawing of the toga of self-righteousness with the declaration to the states, "I wash my hands of the blood of these innocents that suffer because of the liquor traffic; see ye to it." But regardless of what laws a commonwealth may choose to pass, without the co-operation of the federal government, it is helpless in the absolute control of the sale of intoxicating drink. So the government reaps its revenue, the brewers garner the profits of their trade, and the people see their sacred laws torn down and trampled in the dust with immunity and disrespect.

By every means known to skillful lawyers and crafty politicians the liquor interests seek to evade and nullify existing prohibitory laws: by making laws unstable through a change in administrative policy; through delay in courts, perjuries, and carelessness in gathering and producing evidences; through filing offices with men that are known to be two-faced and mercenary, and through electing members to the legislature who upon every question of moral significance are vacillating and dissembling. They have perfidiously wormed their way into the political parties of the land, and have manipulated and adjusted conditions so adroitly, that no matter what party comes into power the liquor interests control. In St. Louis the political bosses of the Republican and the Democratic parties are both prominent and wealthy brewers. The policies and candidates of a party are dictated to it against the will of the majority. Enraging as these facts are to the lover of Justice and the square deal, the truth which brings to every honest mind a bitter antagonism and undying hatred is, that when good men are elected to office, who enforce the law, who enact progressive and humanitarian legislation, and refuse to be governed by the liquor power, they are immediately and morally knifed by the liquor element in the political world. Good works in public office has been the signal for a death warrant for many men. Witness the valiant efforts of Governor Hadley of Indiana for good government, and also his defeat at the hands of the liquor politicians. The fate of Governor Folk of Missouri was sealed in the same manner. Wanting even the slightest feelings of compunction they ruthlessly poured out the life current of Senator Carmack of Tennessee, the fearless Lovejoy of Prohibition.

As a result of these artful intrigues, this colossal law breaker of the age boasts that there is not a spot on the globe lying under the Stars and Stripes where it is impossible to send and to sell alcoholic beverages. And the citizens of self respecting states, who long for a purer political life and a deeper veneration for law, become discouraged as they regard the futility of their efforts for absolute enforcement, and in their helplessness they yield a reluctant assent that perhaps, after all, Prohibition does not prohibit, and permit the repeal of salutary statutes. Meanwhile the drunkard, aware of the impotence of some laws, comes to believe that all law may be disrespected. Anarchy is the result. Slow and insidious has been the growth of this state of affairs, until to-day the governing institutions of the American People are threatened with decay and ruin.

The crisis of the hour calls for drastic changes in handling this tremendous evil. The need of the cause is not so much for more prohibition territory, as it is for a concentration of effort on the strict execution of present enactments. We rejoice in the passage of the Webb bill, for though vastly insufficient still is it an important step in the final solution of interstate commerce problems. This new and untried law must be given the unrelenting support of every American that would be true to his country, until there is a complete recognition of the laws of prohibition states. The power to make this law a living and potent strength against the associated brewers rests in the ultimate with the people. Good men must be placed in positions of public trust by strong constituencies, and when they endeavor to fulfil the oath of their office, they must be kept in control. Not only is a powerful following needed at the ballot box, but it is a pre-eminent requisite throughout the entire term of office. And above all, when a brave warrior makes a good fight, keep him at his post; do not allow the slandering words of his enemies to soil his reputation; suffer not the lavish and ill-gained money of the saloon to throw him out of office. Be watchful, then, and stand firm. Uphold the faithful servant of the state, until he has time to make laws whereby it is possible to enforce prohibitory measures, and until a firm precedent of strict and just law enforcement has been established.

Citizens of America, see the mighty forces that are against us; hear the call for valiant support that comes to us from the line of battle. Shall we not answer it? Is not the prize enough? The fate of the sacred governing institutions of the American people trembles upon the answer we make to these questions. To each individual sounds the tones of appeal. Let us drive back the danger that threatens the existence of our civilization. Let us guard well the holy laws of the land, and put beneath our feet forever the enemy of our country that seeks to annul its statutes and make their voice a silent mockery. Then shall the war for prohibition sweep on to its final victory, when we may proudly unfurl before the nations of the earth a flag cleansed from the filth, the degradation, and the woe of the liquor evil; when the world will behold us a people whose hearts are filled with a reverence for law, whose juridical institutions stay the shock of every social storm, and whose national character stands forth without a peer,—unstained and inviolate.
