

The Clock's Still Tickin'

We, the yearbook staff, hope you enjoy the 89th volume of the SC Moundbuilder.

a new beginning...
or end of time as we know it?

The Clock's Still Tickin'

For approximately 94 years the Southwestern College Moundbuilder has kept a record of events each year; but this tradition, like many others, will cease if we do not survive into the next millennium. From generation to generation, the prophecy that the world will end in the year 2000 has been a popular belief among people all over the world. Another rumored disaster is the infamous Y2K bug that will bring mass chaos to computer-operated devices at midnight on January 1, 2000. While no one knows the outcomes of these predictions, the computer technicians at SC are confident that no major problems will arise within the computer network on campus. They are confident that the time, money, and persistence they have put into preventing Y2K crashes will be worthwhile.

For most of the SC community, the Y2K scare has not played a significant role in their lives. Everything from traditional events to everyday activities have occurred as they normally would. The year started out the same with annual events such as Freshman Work Day, Kick Back Day, a Carnival, and a Jinx Dance. Some students still committed the everyday act of driving 50 feet to class; and the cross-country teams were again KCAC champions.

There is some hype centering around the date May 5, 2000. The planets will align and supposedly the earth's weather patterns will be severely altered; this could lead to mass destruction and possibly the end of the world as we know it. Do you believe this?

Even though things went on as they always have, Southwestern experienced new faces, new leadership, and new challenges that made significant changes in our world. The International student population on campus doubled in size; also, certain leadership positions in both student organizations and college offices were filled by new people. Other substantial modifications at SC were the integration of laptop computers, the renovations in several buildings, and the donation of $1,000,000 to the Performing Arts department.

The Moundbuilder underwent some changes in the field of technology. The 1999-2000 Moundbuilder staff decided to hop on the computer technology bandwagon. By using Jostens' Yeartech program for the opening section, the first sixteen pages were made on the computer and sent to Jostens on a Zip disk. The staff selected "The Clock's Still Tickin'" as the theme in order to symbolize the continuance of life.

time to take cover Warning: end nearing

With all the end-of-the-world theories floating about, the staff wanted to strengthen the fact that life goes on despite the many changes that affect us. Following the trend of predictions for the year 2000, the Moundbuilder staff decided to develop surveys of their own thoughts and predictions. Elements of clocks and apocalyptic phrases were added to emphasize the theme.

While the SC campus has taken only the necessary steps to adapt for the computer-bug disaster, many cautious people throughout the world approach the problems of the new year expecting the worst-case scenario. By stocking up on water and nonperishable goods, these groups seem to be prepared for a bleak future; some are even awaiting the end of time as we know it. While their theories may be true, there is also a chance that time will just keep on tickin'...

Student Government Association

Upholding the Peace

The 1999-2000 Student Government Association dealt with the usual student related issues. A number of areas of concern were given to committees to investigate and make recommendations. The weekly Monday night meetings brought a variety of issues to the table from should the Thetas be allowed to have a chapter house on campus to how lighting can be improved on campus.

The officers for 1999-2000 were President Lisa Phillips, Vice President Joanna Moss, Treasurer Andrea Pearce, and Secretary Seth Leeper.

The Moundbuilder

Moundbuilder Compliant

by Amy Govert

The Southwestern College yearbook, throughout the opening pages of the the Moundbuilder, rolled into the 21st century with the work of four editors and fourteen staff members. The organization continued to capture the life and times of SC, as it had done for the past 94 years.

Along with the addition of new members, the organization also enjoyed the benefits of modern technology. The staff took advantage of the digital cameras and new computers purchased for the purpose of student publications. Jiana Wilson commented, "It was nice to have the opportunity to create a page on the computer, rather than continuing with the old cut-and-paste method."

The ability to create actual pages on the computer also brought about the freedom to manipulate objects on a page. Evidence of this can be seen throughout the opening pages of the Moundbuilder. In addition to options provided by YearTech, a program supported by Jostens, the coloration of photos and the dimensions of graphics were enhanced by using Adobe PhotoShop. "This is the first time that the Moundbuilder has been subjected to the full power of modern technology. We actually had the ability to do cool things and be more creative," stated Shelly Fraley. As the organization successfully adapted to new media options, the work environment continued to be wrought with chaos. Publication deadlines kept the staff on its toes throughout the year. "Some things never change," stated Amie Liebau. "But, at least this year's book will look better."

The Collegian

Changes For the Future

The official student newspaper of Western College, the Collegian, has been a part of campus life during three centuries. Since 1896 the bi-weekly publication has been an active media force for the college community. The newspaper has been the primary source of information concerning activities related to the student body, on and off campus. Two editors and staff members recognized student concerns, sporting events, guest speakers and performers, and profiled SC students and faculty members. In time for the millennium, the paper received a make-over. Thanks to updated equipment and digital photography the publication rolled off the presses with a fresh look and new perspectives about college life. Co-editor Jeana Clark stated, "With the addition of several more IBM clones, our system of production became more stable. This gave us the opportunity to produce a new look for the Collegian."

Beyond system upgrades, the staff experienced management changes. The departure of Lonna Summers, editor, allowed Kasey Dumler to move into the position of co-editor with Jeana Clark. Dumler's real-world knowledge complemented the years of experience that Clark provided the staff. "It was great to have the chance to move into a position of power within the Collegian staff. I love to make papers bleed," commented Dumler.

While working to make contacts in the field the group had a chili-feed fund-raiser, sold flower bulbs, participated in Bowl for Kids Sake, and held a workshop for education majors on unit planning.

The highlight of the year was helping to plan and implement the Southwestern College Teacher Hall of Fame banquet in May.

Business Students Association

The Business Students Association gives students an opportunity to participate in activities, community service, and collaboration with other students. "Although we weren't as active as we had hoped to be this year we did accomplish many great things," said Jami Blom, BSA president. Throughout the year BSA participated in some of the activities required to receive the Purple Heart Award. "Being able to gather with other students and share our ideas about everything from events on campus to future careers, was the best part about BSA. Upperclassmen can share their advice with younger students, while faculty aids the seniors in job searches," said Jessica Sisson.

In conclusion Seth Leeper stated, "BSA provides a base for business students to unite and begin to form connections to be used later in our professional careers. And I guess you could say that our headquarters is Jeanne Dexter's office. She usually tries to keep us on track and is great at adding comic relief during the stressful semesters."

Student Law Association

1999 was the first year for the Student Law Association to be considered an official organization on campus. The main purpose of the group is to prepare students for law school. In doing so the group discussed current issues, studied for the LSAT, worked on applications, and visited law schools. The group consisted of ten members and their sponsor, Andy Shepherd. Bi-weekly meetings were held to conduct business and organize fundraisers, community services, and other projects.

"I am really glad that this group was started. It is very beneficial for the students involved. I hope that any student interested in law school joins the group. And it continues to grow and be more active on campus. I would also like to see a law program set up at Southwestern," said Sarah Cox.

The group is very busy getting organized and establishing programs for its members. "One of the programs that we have been working on, that hopefully be put into action next year, is the student mentor program. In this program a SC student is paired with a SC alumni in the law field who is their designated mentor," said Megan Herzer.

Leadership

The award winning Leadership Team of Southwestern College was busy during the 1999-2000 school year. One of the projects they have planned and carried out is Freshman Work Day. This unique experience begins the process of the Freshmen becoming part of SC and is always memorable.

The fund-raising "Apples, Apples" takes place during the Walnut Valley Festival and is a huge sticky job. The pies are great, the fun at the festival is great, and the fellowship within the team is great.

Other projects included working on leadership programs with Collegiate and The Independent School in Wichita; working with PFS and the middle school students in Winfield; and work with the after school programs with the elementary schools.

In December the team went to Kansas City and worked with the Salvation Army to fix food and give gifts for those in need.

The team will enter in the 40 Team Excellence Awards. The opportunity to win national recognition is certainly an obvious choice and are up against names like Toyota, Ford, GMC, Hewlett Packard, and many more. The Team has started to get itself up meeting with a consultant to start examining the requirements. They are also incorporating the M Guidelines into their own system to increase the Team's efficiency.

Ambassadors

Making an Impression

by Patricia Krug

Giving prospective students an insider's view of SC was the goal of this year's SHARP Ambassadors organization. Led by Admission Counselor Leslie Grant, the group of seven students was chosen to represent the campus through both individual and group sessions.

In addition to giving more than 300 individual tours, the ambassadors also worked two hours a week in the admissions office, made phone calls and sent postcards.

Many of the students also had the responsibility of hosting overnight guests.

Other obligations of the group were assisting with Explore More Days. Mandy Lampe had this to say about her ambassador experience: "Not only do you get to meet prospective students of SC, but you just might be able to help in the decision making process of finding the right college by their impression of SC through you. That to me is a reward in itself that I will always cherish as a huge part of my own SC experience."

Tutors

Tedious Tutors

By Kylee Ward

The definition of a tutor is one who gives special instruction to another, but the tutors of Southwestern College are so much more. Housed in the Cooperative Learning Center in the upper level of Sutton Hall, the tutors started off a great year. Along with giving up time and brainpower, the tutors also made new friends and stepped toward future goals. Josh Wheatley, who wants to get his Ph.D. in Biochemistry said, "I think when I get to graduate school I will work as a teachers assistant. This is where my skills as a tutor will come in handy. I can help the undergraduate students with their assignments." The tutors of Southwestern College were not only available to help athletes study, but also for anyone who needed the help. "My goal for this year is to help as many people as I can, not only students who need tutoring but anyone who has questions concerning the college," said Kasey Dumler. Ryan Rusco, who plans to become a high school teacher after college claimed his goal was "not to mess up somebody's assignment. I hope the students will not have any problems or be embarrassed to ask one of the tutors for help. Even if we don't know the answers ourselves, we can probably find somebody who does." All in all the tutors had a great time helping others. Who said studying can't be fun?

Share Southwestern

by John Morgan

The Share Southwestern Team has been very busy. The beginning of the year was a bit disheartening when the team had to say good-bye to the Le Flair because of the plans to build the new freshman girl's dorm in its place. They held a garage sale and sold most of the items inside.

The organization also assisted in Freshmen Orientation weekend. First, they helped get the freshmen settled in their new rooms. Then, they became "the ladder brigade" who delivered ladders to each of the Freshman Study sites.

Other service projects they participated in during the year include working with the Partners for Success program at the Winfield Middle School, painting group homes for Martin Luther Homes, and decorating the "Baby Closet" at the Light House Maternity Home in Kansas City, MO.

"Through Share I have been able to help people and serve God on my campus, in the community, and throughout the country," said Treva Summers.

Share Southwestern is one of the leading service organizations on campus. The members have worked very hard throughout the year meeting many new people, cultivating friendships and having fun while striving to help those in need.

SC Debate/Forensics End a Winning Season

SC Debate hosted the second annual Moundbuilder Invitational Tournament/ Great Plains Forensic Conference this spring with over 80 people in attendance. The two-day tournament was the culmination of a very successful year for the Southwestern Debate/Forensics team.

Throughout the year, the team has had success in many tournaments. Newcomer Soshi Kawabe, from Japan, excelled in dramatic and prose interpretation, as did Nadia VanDorn, from Kent, Washington. Dawn Short also competed in dramatic and prose interpretation and did very well. Jeremiah Jones, Garden City, KS, Ryan Kane, Wellington, KS, and Rob Fry, Winfield, KS, competed in impromptu speaking. Kane and Fry also performed in Lincoln-Douglas Debate. Kelli Cox, Copan, OK, joined the squad second semester and did well in persuasive speaking. April Chlumsky, Larned, KS, competed in dramatic interpretation of poetry.

Coach Tracy Frederick was named Pi Kappa Delta Governor of the Plains in December.

Campus Players

Keeping To Tradition

By Amy Govert

With the suggestion of Miss Mandy Lee, Professor of Expression at Southwestern College, the drama students of the school created an honorary club, Campus Players, to support the excellence in dramatic performances. In September 1919 the dramatic society produced one play and assumed the responsibility of the school stage and management.

Today, the organization continues to support campus drama productions and often finds themselves participating in the event. Members of the organization are denoted by the titles "Mr.", "Miss", "Ms." and "Mr."

In addition to any number of productions, the organization is fully responsible for the annual Christmas morality play. This year the club also helped produce The Medium, The Great, My Mac, Inheritance, Broadway

Bound and The Tempest.

Each year the Campus Players sponsor a spring banquet that honors the current and newest members of the club. It is at this time that the caricatures of the graduating seniors are presented and hung in the hall leading to the Little Theatre.

In April 1999 the Campus Players initiated a new tradition. All graduating members of the club wear honorary cords during the ceremony. The cords are gold, purple, red and green -- the colors on the Campus Players mask. Each color represents the four pillars of the organizations Constitution: Commitment, Perseverance, Cooperation and Participation.

"Even though it is a lot of work, being a member of Campus Players is worth the late nights and early Saturday mornings," stated Emily Edwards, club member.

Mass Communications

Media For the Masses

by Amy Govert

The Mass Communications Department of Southwestern College offers first-hand experience to students within the realms of audio, print, and visual media. In addition to the campus newspaper and yearbook, the department includes training in the areas of television broadcasting and radio. Students enter the department with the understanding that the first week of school is designed to establish their crew or staff positions.

This Week at Southwestern College, a televised bi-monthly news program, is the focus of SCTV. The fourteen members on staff present information for and about the campus community during a thirty minute show. Along with valuable studio experience, students learn the basics of shooting and editing by working on crews dedicated to recording specific college events. Keely Stanley, a member of the Sports Crew and anchor, commented, "It was hard to get into the swing of things, I was thrown into jobs that I knew nothing about. Within one semester, however, I've learned how to do a lot of things and now I'm applying for a summer internship."

SC Magazine is produced by a select group of individuals within the department. The feature program covers points of interest related to the Winfield community, in addition to the college. "We produced several shows featuring area 'secrets' this year. For example, our Halloween special focused on regions across the state that claimed to be haunted," stated Kim Okeson. "We visited a couple of these locations in order to conduct our own investigation."

"One of our greatest accomplishments this year," included Scott Miller, "was covering the visit Steve Abrams made to SC. We were there to capture the responses of students and faculty."

KSWC (100.3 FM in Winfield, KS) moves into its thirty-second year of operation. The ten-watt station is owned and operated by the college and requires the efforts of twenty-one student disc jockeys. Once a week, each individual spends three hours in the studio. Despite the format (alternative/rock), music varied between the DJ's and listener requests. All DJ's, however, were required to play fifteen songs off the "KSWC Top 30 Playlist." Office personnel and management of KSCW included: Dr. DeArmond (General Manager), Jason Tattershall (Station Manager), Amy Govert (Production Manager), and Scott Miller (Program Director).

Campus Council On Ministry

Reaching Out

by Candice Krug

Campus Council on Ministry is made up of representatives from each group of students dedicated to spreading the word of God to the campus and beyond. Some of the projects started on campus consist of various Bible studies, Fellowship of Christian Athletes and weekly student-lead chapel service. The opportunities to reach beyond the campus are operated mostly by outreach teams formed of Southwestern students.

These outreach teams include: Praise Team, W.O.W., Selah, Keynotes, Urgent Message, Mime & Mission, Mission Team Leaders, and the World Witness Team. Each group has a special area of focus on which they base their service projects. Karen Wilder, leader of the Mime and Mission group explained her vision of the group's future: "The Mime and Mission team feels very called to go to the unreached. We want to use the talents God has given us in a way that is honoring to Him and in a way He can use us to shout His message of salvation to the world."

Fellowship of Christian Athletes is also a large part of CCOM. The purpose of FCA is to witness to as many people as possible through the miracles of God in athletics. Some of the events participated in this year include the high school witnessing rally, Godfest 2000, and KAYAK (Kollege and Young Adult Kamp). Members also take a covenant to join, and FCA honors a specific athlete each week.

Many students find involvement in these groups to be both rewarding for themselves and for the many communities reached by their ministry. Stacie Fraley, Campus Ministry Intern, is responsible for organizing the outreach team's appointments and coordinating schedules. She sums up the goal of CCOM by saying, "CCOM seeks to unify the various ministries on campus in order to most effectively communicate our mission as Christians. The mission is to share the Gospel of Christ with our campus, community, and world."

Discipleship Discipleship

Disciples Through Service

by Julie Morgan

Discipleship is one of the leading service organizations on the SC campus. They have participated in projects over the year such as Make a Difference Day and Outreach teams, which were sent out in the surrounding areas.

This is a great program, which shows the students how to become better disciples by studying the Word of God and helping their fellow man.

Over the last year, the organization has placed 14 interns and 10 summer interns in area churches. Many of these internships were in youth ministry.

After their exciting trip to Italy in May of 1999, the team decided their next trip would be to the Holy Land in the year 2001.

Psychology Club

Becoming More Involved

by Sarah Thuma

The 1999-2000 school year was the Psychology Club's fifth year on campus. The fairly young organization increased its membership and became more involved around campus during the year. While membership is open to all students, this year's members mostly consisted of students who had a major or minor in Psychology. The club kicked off the year by holding a BBQ at Claudia Geer's house. They were involved with homecoming activities, including providing refreshments at the production of The Medium and participating in the homecoming parade. Another way they strengthened the organization was by having several guest speakers at their meetings. Michelle Rosell spoke about rape, a major problem on college campuses. Then at a later meeting, Phil Schmidt spoke about communication in relationships. With the help of the Leadership Team, the Psychology Club ended the year with a walk-a-thon in April to raise money for the Multiple Sclerosis Foundation.

Increasing Involvement

By Sarah Thuma and Kylee Ward

Kappa Mu Epsilon, Southwestern College's Mathematical Honor Society, consists mostly of math majors, but is open to everyone. Math Club was involved in a number of different activities during the year while working toward the Purple Heart Award. They took part in the Homecoming parade and showed the movie October Sky for their all-campus event. For their community service project, they visited an elementary class and taught them about origami and tessellations. Ashley Helfrich commented, "We hoped to share with the kids an aspect of mathematics that they weren't quite as familiar with, and could learn something from and also have fun with."

Southwestern's athletic training department consists of an internship program for students interested in the field. Through this program student trainers learn skills in emergency first aid, prevention, recognition, treatment, and rehabilitation of athletic injuries. The internship requires the student to obtain 1500 clinical hours working under the direct supervision of Head Certified Athletic Trainer, Brian Norton. According to Norton, "a student athletic trainer must be committed to helping others." Once the education requirements and the internship hours are completed, the student is eligible to apply to take the National Athletic Trainers' Association Board of Certification exam to become nationally certified.

Far From Home

by Heather Jeffery

The International Club consists of students of all nationalities. The members are active in the Winfield community where they are invited to speak to the public about their home countries. "We try to do activities similar to what we do in our own countries," member Denisse Camarena stated. During the year the organization hosted a series of international films and set up displays in the library. "Our goal as an organization is to make the American students aware of other countries," commented Natalya Mikhailova.

B.O.E.

Deadlines? Who Cares?

by Hue H. Kares

The B.O.E., or Burnt Out Editors, is comprised of the Moundbuilder and Collegian editors and sponsors. Frustrated with the incompetence of slackers, the B.O.E. formed May 8, 2000 when they realized they were the only people left to finish their publication projects. All year long their blood, sweat and tears were poured into every page and issue of each of their respective publications. Requirements for this prestigious organization are dedication, dependability, patience, a good sense of humor, and a strong opinion. Four-year member Jeana Clark boasted, "The great thing about being a B.O.E. is bossing people around and getting my own way!"

The pictures and captions reflect the B.O.E.'s views on various subjects. The B.O.E. would like to state that they are not affiliated with SGA and are not considered a legitimate organization, so don't make us go to the meetings. We hope that no one was offended by this page, but if you were, who cares?

Logos

Logos = Logic

1) Greek Philosophy Reason, of as constituting the principle of the universe manifested by speech. 2) Theology the eternal thought of God, made incarnate in Christ: John 1. In these definitions, the Logos of Southwestern is dedicated to reason. The group is open but is especially geared toward philosophy and religion majors.

Logos sponsored several speakers and events. Tom Scheafer, religion and ethics editor for the Wichita Eagle was the first outside speaker for the year.

The most well attended and controversial presentation was when Steve Abrams, Kansas State Board of Education member from Arkansas City, spoke about the decision of the board to recommend that evolution was only a theory and should not be taught in Kansas Schools.

Beta Beta Beta is a biological society for students involved in the sciences. "We have such a large membership and I think it's great to have so many people involved. They devote so much energy into this just because of interest and for the fellowship. They are not receiving any financial support from the activity," Tri-Beta sponsor Pat Ross stated.

The organization met twice a month to listen to presentations ranging from veterinary to osteopathic medicine. They also did a number of community service projects including Kid's Science Day, Earth Day and running the campus recycling center. Pi Delta Sigma

1999-2000 Vision Statement

shared by Pi Delta Sigma members

Pi Delta Sigma is an organization that brings together students of all different majors and backgrounds. Each member is different, but through brotherhood and sisterhood, we members become one. We are part of a family who support and listen and is there for each other in the school and the surrounding community. Pi Delta Sigma exhibits leadership through participation in school activities, community service and the organization of events. It is from these activities that they learn and grow together as a family. Though they develop special bonds with those who are their brothers and sisters, at the same time, they also believe that there is something wonderful inside of everyone. Although some Deltas may have their faults, they develop good habits from their family and incorporate them into their lives. The experiences they take away from this involvement are ones that will make them better individuals in the future.

Phi Delta Theta

The Boyz Home

By Amy Govert

The Phi Delta Theta Chapter of Southwestern College spent the 1999-2000 academic year in negotiations for a fraternity house. After two years of research, the chapter first presented their idea to the student body in late January. While the campus body reacted with mixed expressions, the organization did their best to appease concerns.

"Greek life is important to any campus community. Southwestern College could only benefit from what we are trying to do," stated Troy Lucas, Phi Delta Theta President.

"Having a house will help bring us closer together as a fraternity," added Charlie Sitzler, a newly initiated member of the organization.

The proposal for a fraternity house on campus followed the announcement of the national organizations intent to ban alcohol from all of its 175 chapters. If the proposed home doesn't remain alcohol free, the organization will lose its charter.

While the fraternity continues to discuss the future residence of its members, the organization participated in several events throughout the year. In addition to being co-sponsors of Maggie LaVine's senior project, the group helped maintain the fairgrounds during the Walnut Valley Festival.

Sigma Iota Sigma

Dedicated Sisters

by Amy Monical

Sigma Iota Sigma is the only female sorority on the SC campus. The chapter was founded on March 1979 by Deb Goering. The chapter is now looking towards the future of becoming nationally known.

"There are many new pledges, we are looking up people who have the ability it takes to go national," Kelley Pearce said.

The chapter organized the food drive, Homecoming, and Spring Luau for the school. As a sorority they do a lot of things such as sleepovers, Halloween parties, and planning different events. They have been contributing our time and energy doing fund-raisers in a number of ways the size of Winfield has never seen part of such a great group before," Kim Okeson said.

It has had its largest number of members this year. The actives initiated new members with a small ceremony. They had a traditional spaghetti dinner at sponsor Dena Allison's house. Brandi Richardson expressed, "I enjoy being a member and Historian. Looking back at the pictures taken during the spaghetti dinner and winter formal, it is easy to see that we do know how to smile."

In the future, the girls are looking at options of either becoming a member of an existing national sorority, or establishing SIS as a nationally recognized sorority. "It's a long, hard process to go national. It takes a lot of hard work and a lot of time and commitment," Dena Allison said.

SIS veteran, Rachelle Jesseph agrees that "it does take a lot of hard work to go national, but our organization has achieved much. I've learned how to help the community, and I've found that it can be fun. I enjoyed doing activities like the food drive and school functions. I think next year will be even better."

Cheerleading

The number of cheerleaders might have been low this year, but their spirits were high. The returning squad of six added one new face, Courtney Radcliffe, to the group. "The squad welcomed me with open arms, even if they were always teasing me about being the baby," commented Radcliffe.

The cheerleaders focused on crowd involvement and creating a positive athletic atmosphere. "Our main goal was to get the crowd pumped up! We have worked really hard on crowd interaction this year. It really makes the game when the crowd is involved, and that is our job," said Tracey Stapleton, captain. With both football and basketball teams going into the playoff round, this year required more time and dedication from the cheerleaders.

The cheerleader's season is almost year-round beginning the first day back from summer vacation and ending after tryouts, which are held in early Spring. "We have almost twice as long of a season as most sports do. Sometimes the hours get long, but I always miss it when the season is over," said Tessa Ball.

Dance

The Black Cats, pom squad, had another busy year. The young squad consisted of five new members who joined and returning three. Jessica Graves, first Black Cat said, "This was the most fun I've ever had participating in a school activity. I got to meet a ton of people, and had the opportunity to do something I've never done before. This would not have been possible at a big school." Overall it was a building year, where technique and skills were emphasized and greatly improved upon. The determination of the new members combined with the existing leadership resulted in a successful season for the Black Cats.

Their season got off to an early start with the squad holding tryouts at the beginning of the fall semester. They kept the pace up by participating in numerous events including the Moundbuilding Ceremony, Homecoming bonfire, and parade. The Black Cats regularly performed at all home football and basketball games. In addition, they cheered at the home basketball games.

Members of the squad were responsible for choreographing and teaching dances to the group. The Black Cats danced to a variety of music ranging from funk to oldies. Several new dance styles were also experimented with this year. One of the crowd's favorites was a contemporary step routine. Kari Good said, "One of my favorite performances was the step routine. Tie-dying our tank tops was fun, even if our hands were still purple for the game...our shirts looked great!"

The volleyball team, coached by Julie Murphy, Betty Haunschild, Sara Peterson, and Lori Wedel was able to rise above KCAC predictions. The team was expected to place eighth in the conference out of nine teams, however, the Lady Builders took a small but important step up to seventh. Angie Busch explained their success by saying, "People want to be there and are enjoying themselves, and trying really hard on the courts." Co-captains Lisa Phillips and Busch led the team with hard work and dedication.

Honorable Mention All-Conference recognition went to Lesley McCarty and Sara Smith. Smith replied "Any award that anyone gets is an honor, however the team helped me receive it. It wasn't just me as an individual." McCarty was also named Freshman of the Year for the Conference.

The team celebrated the season with a banquet where co-captain Busch was named the team MVP and Natalie Rose was named Most Improved. Finally, McCarty was named the team's New Player of the Year.

The girls finished the season with a 7-18 record. Coach Murphy reflected on the season saying, "We played pretty well. It's hard when you have most of your team as freshmen and we traveled right off the bat."

The 1999-2000 Southwestern Moundbuilder football team finished their season with a record of 8-3, surpassing previous goals they had set. They were crowned KCAC Champions for the third straight year, and the Builders defeated their long-time rivals, the Bethany Swedes, in overtime during the homecoming game. Senior Nate Turner stated, "The most memorable moment of this season was the Bethany game when Kevin Langford kicked the winning field goal." Coach Monty Lewis had this to say, "I am really proud of the three consecutive KCAC titles. The superior senior leadership plays an important role in carrying on this tradition. We look forward to bringing home another KCAC title."

Turner and Andrew Vargas were selected as NAIA All-Americans. All-American Honorable Mention went to Silas Robertson and Rick Smith. KCAC Conference First Team offense went to Turner and Robertson. First Team Defense was Jon Runion, Smith and Vargas. Adam Hass and Wiley Jackson were named Second Team Offense, and Ricky Johnson was awarded Second Team Defense. Honorable Mention went to DJ Bell, Josh Browne, Sean Strickland, Joey Brooks and Darryl Brooks. Jackson stated, "see SC football winning many KCAC titles and proving we are number one!"

"In our first two seasons we had a whopping two wins. In this last season we increased that number three times. We are improving, and our coach is doing a good job of getting us talented recruits in each freshman class. I think in a few years we will be a program to be reckoned with," said Joe Gilmore.

The men's soccer team put forth a great deal of effort this year. While playing, they learned how to rely on each other. They have steadily improved since last season, and hope to increase their intensity for next year.

"The guys had a lot of fun and the season was a positive experience," said Travis Hastings.

As the season came to a close the men realized the great friendships they had made. They finished the season with 5 wins, 10 losses, and 2 ties.

The 1999-2000 Women's Soccer season started off a little slow. There were many new faces on the team, so the players had to learn how to work with each other. "I was worried about coming on as a freshman and not being accepted by the rest of the team, but I did get to know everyone," said Heidi Bates, freshman.

Though there were many injuries, the girls kept up the hard work. They had many early morning practices and several late nights with class work. After a long hard stretch, they ended the season with two wins, thirteen losses, and two ties.

"We struggled some throughout this season, but that says nothing about the talent we have on the team. Next year is looking very positive, so I'm hoping everyone works hard this offseason and summer and comes out next season to win the KCAC conference!!!!" said Brandy Richardson.

This year's men's basketball team had a strong season with a large amount of new freshmen team members. Freshman Devin Nightengale was unanimously voted 1st Team All-KCAC and KCAC Co-Freshman of the Year. Junior Dustin Hundley received Honorable Mention All-KCAC. One of the team's most memorable games was the defeat of Oklahoma Christian, ranked fifth in the nation.

"It was a hard fought game, but we came through with a victory!" Rich Bartow said reflecting on the event. They ended the season with the record of 10 wins and 19 losses.

Freshman Work Day

By Julie Morgan, Elda Perales, Jiana Wilson

On August 21, 1999, just one day after arriving on campus, new students were challenged to serve the Winfield community. Freshman Work Day is an annual event organized by the Leadership Team. The idea focused around the Leadership Team's mission statement "service through leadership." One hundred forty-three incoming freshmen, along with some transfer students, were divided into 16 groups for the day. Each group included a faculty or staff sponsor and a representative from the Leadership Team.

"It was a great way to start off the school year. It was fun getting to know new people and rewarding to see the face of the person we helped out," said freshman Rhyan Anderson.

Many of the groups were sent out into the community to scrape and paint houses. Some were sent to the Red Cross, others to clean up brush, and some helped at a yard sale.

After a long, hard day of strenuous labor, the workers attended a banquet held in their honor. At the banquet, workday stories were shared and a video of the day was presented.

Rockpainting

By Jamie Jansonius and Anna Morris

Every year, the lawn of Wallingford Hall is littered with excited students, large rocks, and lots of paint. This year was no exception; on August 14, 1999 dozens of SC students gathered together for the annual rock painting ceremony. Representatives from almost every organization on campus participated, and many people made individual rocks to place on the ever-growing mound.

"I felt there was more involvement displayed throughout each organization; that's a good way to kick off the new year as a Moundbuilder!" said Rose Mans.

While for most people, the rock painting ceremony was a creative way to leave their mark on the college, others labeled it a moment of festivity. "The rock painting party was a fun way to bring the students of SC together, and it introduced the freshmen and new students to one of the greatest traditions here at Southwestern," said Ashley Helfrich. She also claimed it was a good way to mingle and it gave everyone a chance to show off their creative ideas at the Moundbuilding Ceremony.

This year marked the 72nd year of the college's most unique tradition. Newcomers to the college community, along with those who have experienced the ceremony in the past, were given the opportunity to add their own little piece of history to a Mound built over the years by their predecessors. Megan Herzer participated in the ceremony "because it's part of SC tradition and I think it's a lot of fun."

The event began with opening statements from President Merriman, and was followed by Sara Weinert and Jill Megredy reading speech excerpts from former deans. Organizational, class and sport rocks were introduced before the audience was permitted to add their individual rocks to the Mound. Shonda French boasted that her favorite was her fraternity's rock, Pi Delta Sigma "because you could tell we put a lot of time and effort into it."

Kick Back Day

By Candice Krug and Shelly Fraley

On Saturday, August 28th, several Southwestern students "kicked back" and relaxed during a day of fun in the sun at the annual Kick Back Day. Sponsored by the Student Government Association and Phi Delta Theta, the event began at 11:00 a.m. and consisted of a hotdog and hamburger cookout followed by mud and sand volleyball competitions.

Because the event ran so smoothly participants may not have realized the amount of work that actually went on behind the scenes. "SGA and Phi Delta Theta put in a lot of hard work on Friday night and Saturday morning to make the courts ready in time for the competition. The competition could not have taken place without the maintenance crew," expressed Jacob Tuttle. The hard work was well worth it as many students crowded the area to eat and participate in some dirty, yet friendly competition.

Each member of the winning teams received a bright green championship T-shirt. SAA took first in mud volleyball, while Phi Delta Theta won the sand volleyball tournament. SGA vice president Joanna Moss summed up the event by declaring, "Despite the heat, everyone seemed to enjoy themselves."

Homecoming

By Jamie Jansonius

"Cruisin' Around SC" was the theme for Homecoming 1999. From participating in the parade to running in the Builderdash, many people were involved in traditional activities. The weekend festivities started off with the coronation of the Ugly Man and Homecoming Queen on Friday afternoon.

The parade saw a record number of entries. The Tri-Beta float rode away with the "Best Float Award." Dance Team member Megan Burns said, "I was on the dance team and we got to ride in the new firetruck. It was really cool that we got to do that, it made the day even more exciting." For others like Troy Lucas carrying the Phi Delta Theta banner down Main Street "was the most (he) had walked in a long time."

An added surprise to the weekend came as the football players found a tree planted on the 50 yard line Saturday morning. Long-time rivals, Bethany, had planted it the night before. The tree was removed prior to the matchup. "It was an amazing game because you could feel the tension in the crowd. One team would score, then the other and back and forth before we won." Elda Perales said.

"The dance was a positive campus wide event that gave students, a chance to interact and meet each other. It should be continued every year." Mike Ziser said.

For students, alumni, and friends, cruising down memory lane or creating new memories made Homecoming a highlight in the school year. "Homecoming was a great experience. The game was unbelievable and the parade was a success for all of SC," Justin Frost said.

Winter Formal

By Jamie Jansonius

On Saturday December 11th, music was jiving from the Elk's Lodge. The annual Sigma Iota Sigma Winter Formal danced into the millennium.

"I thought that the turn out was greater and it seemed like everyone was having a great time, which is what Sigma Iota Sigma wanted it to be all about," said Tessa Ball.

Slushy refreshments and party mix were changes from the traditional cookies and drinks. However, the sorority voted on something less traditional for this year.

The evening's theme required covering the walls of the dance floor in heavy-duty black paper from the floor up to six feet. It was hard work hiding the numerous awards, trophies and closets behind the decorations, but the transformation was successfully completed the night before the dance.

"Sigma did a really great job putting it all together, and the decorations like the moon and stars looked great," commented Layna Ford.

Attendees of the dance complemented the sorority on a job well done. Hard work from people like Kaysha Valerde paid off at the dance. "Kim and I danced on the DJ's speaker in front of the dance floor. We each had our little fun after all the hard work we put into it."

Valentine's Dance

By Kylee Ward

Co-sponsored by Pi Delta Sigma and SAA, the theme for this year's Valentine's dance was Greek Love. Toga was the attire, but was not necessary to attend. "I have never had so much fun wearing a Pooh sheet," said Ephanie DeBey. At the end of the dance, prizes were awarded for best toga and worst Valentine's Day story. Mike Ziser was awarded $25 and a C.D. for his elegant green toga. Josh Thuma and Tara Patterson received boxers, teddy bears, and C.D.'s for their pathetic Valentine stories. "The DJ was pretty awesome. He played a lot of different music, was open to requests, and even took part in some of the dances," said Sarah Thuma. Overall the dance was a success and everyone left with a commemorative cup.

Spring Fling

By Jamie Jansonius

SAA and SIS had a wonderful Spring Fling planned for students; however, the weather canceled all afternoon activities. SAA's plans for big toys and sand volleyball were both foiled by rain. "The weather did not want to cooperate. It was too damp and rainy," Tessa Ball said.

Although, the show did go on. SIS moved the luau into the cafeteria and set the tables with a Hawaiian motif. They pitched a tent and had more than enough refreshments for everyone. A small crowd danced to the funk-retro music that was played by students.

The dance lasted from nine until a little past midnight. One of the highlights of the evening was the limbo competition. The Sigma girls reported the dance to be a success, and they enjoyed putting it together.

Kristin Wollenberg praised SIS for "making the dance a lot of fun. Stacey (Hart) and I had a dodge-ball war with the beach balls."

Faculty Follies

It's the end of school. Finals are next week and they are ready. It's time to be released from the bondage of the classroom. Students? No, faculty and staff!

As a celebration and to raise money for the "Kaps for Kids" program, faculty and staff created a night of fun, known as the Faculty Follies.

From Associate Dean of Faculty Sharon Shetlar singing "I Can Cook," to Women Behaving Badly with their Greek Chorus, the audience was treated to the good, the grotesque, and the unique.

Produced by Jeanne Dexter, the program also included Sue Simmons, Dan Bowker, Mikel Dexter, Steve Rankin, Michelle Boucher, Kathy Wilgers, Jill Megredy, Ken Kraus, Josh Thuma, Alice Keith, Jeff Stine, Monty Lewis and Jovana Lloyd.

Campus Events

By Amy Govert

On any given day, the campus life of SC is shaped by events related to the function of the college. While some of these events affect the student body, others attract the attention of the local community or extended SC family. While it is impossible to record each and every event that the college hosted during the 1999-2000 school year, the Moundbuilder staff has collected a variety of images seen on campus during this past year. From athletic events to Founders Day, musical engagements to visiting lecturers SC was host to a variety of names and faces.

the clock's still tickin'

...As the final pencil was laid down after the last test was given, the 1999-2000 school year came to an end. There were no natural disasters, no world catastrophies on New Year's Eve, and no major computer malfunctions. The clock kept on tickin', and SC kept on livin'. In fact, Southwestern charged into the new era with advances in technology, generous funding, and strong leadership. With such a promising outlook, SC will continue to be a model of excellence as long as The Clock's Still Tickin'.

A stylized clock face graphic is centered on the page. It features a dark circular center with two hands: a shorter, thicker hour hand and a longer, thinner minute hand. The hands are positioned to indicate a time around 1:50. A thick, dark horizontal band crosses the middle of the clock face, passing behind the hands. The background of the clock face is light, while the area below the hands is dark.
