The Community That Is...

Southwestern College

By Nick Swink and Amy Govert-Larson

Three weeks into the Southwestern College's 117th year, our lives were changed forever. We at Southwestern College set off to our classes, confident we were on our way to the brighter future a college education brings. What we didn't know was that very morning 19 men were boarding four major airline planes with ill will in their hearts. On September 11th, 2001 at 8:48 EST our world stopped to watch the events unfold. The unthinkable had happened. International terrorists attacked on American soil.

George W. Bush waited two days to make a solid statement of intent. The War on Terrorism had begun. The campus community responded with shock, then acceptance and finally we began to think about the issues as they related to our own beliefs. We made the issues our own and incorporated them into our nation's renewed sense of patriotism.

As traumatic as the events of September 11th were, the world continued to turn and life went on. Our own proud traditions left unscathed by the hand of international terrorism we began a new year just as students have for over a century at SC. Looking over the Walnut Valley, the heart of Southwestern College continued to beat within the walls of the Christy Administration building.

In March 1956 the building which now stands high atop the 77 was named after R.B. Christy, a resident of Scott City and a prominent member of society. His donation helped rebuild the structure after a fire destroyed the original building, Richardson Hall.

Richardson Hall stood from 1908-1950. James H. Richardson not only donated the money needed for the building's construction, but had a keen interest in the curriculum taught at the college. A man of science, Richardson had hoped that Craniology (the study of the head) would be added to the course list. Thus, a strong scientific foundation flourished alongside the college's rooted Christian faith.

In 2002, the Christy Administration building continues to function as the center of Southwestern College. In addition to housing the office of President Dick Merriman, the structure contains College Services. Also on the second floor of Christy, Richardson Auditorium. After years of discussion, the first steps of renovating the auditorium began in December. In hopes of preventing another catastrophic fire, the school installed a sprinkler system above the stage and throughout the Helen Graham Little Theatre, located in the basement. Plans for a complete renovation are still being discussed.

In addition to housing vital administrative offices and community spaces, Christy also holds entire departments within its limestone exterior. The first floor of the building contains the faculty offices and classrooms for those associated with the Communication Arts, History, Mass Communications, Psychology and Theatre Departments. Student publications such as The Collegian and The Moundbuilder are produced in the basement of Christy. Students of Debate and Forensics congregate the hall with performers, costumers and technicians from the Theatre Department. Together, these students represent part of the Liberal Arts background that once drove Southwestern College.

From the third floor office and classroom windows of Christy, the Walnut Valley can be seen from one of the highest points in the city of Winfield. Home to the Business Department, faculty and students discuss the challenges our world faces after the September 11th attacks.

As the world reacted to the horrific attacks of September 11th, people found sanity by holding on to time honored traditions. From saying the "Pledge of Allegiance" to watching the World Series, Americans united. The personal freedoms that had been taken for granted were reevaluated as terrorism sought to destroy what is the United States.

Southwestern College is built on tradition, it even lends to our namesake. Every year during the first week of classes, students gather around The Mound and add to the "mound of loyalty" that was established in 1927. As individuals and organizations, those associated with the college unite as Moundbuilders. The 2001 Moundbuilding Ceremony was no different. Students, faculty, alumni and members of the administration gathered at the base of the 77 to watch the Mound grow.

Dean Leroy Allen established this unique tradition on September 8th, 1927. Allen challenged the college community to build a mound of spirit that would grow into a mountain for all to see. He added to the first contributions, a metal lock-box time capsule. When the Mound was moved in 1963, south of Mossman Hall, the time capsule was found rusted through and the original contents were destroyed. A new time capsule has been added and contains items that represent campus life in 1963, as well as a list of original contents placed in the first buried within the Mound.

Another time capsule was buried beside the Mound on August 24th, 2000. The Millennium Time Capsule is marked with a limestone rock and will be opened in one hundred years. Contents of that capsule include items that are much more familiar to those attending SC today.

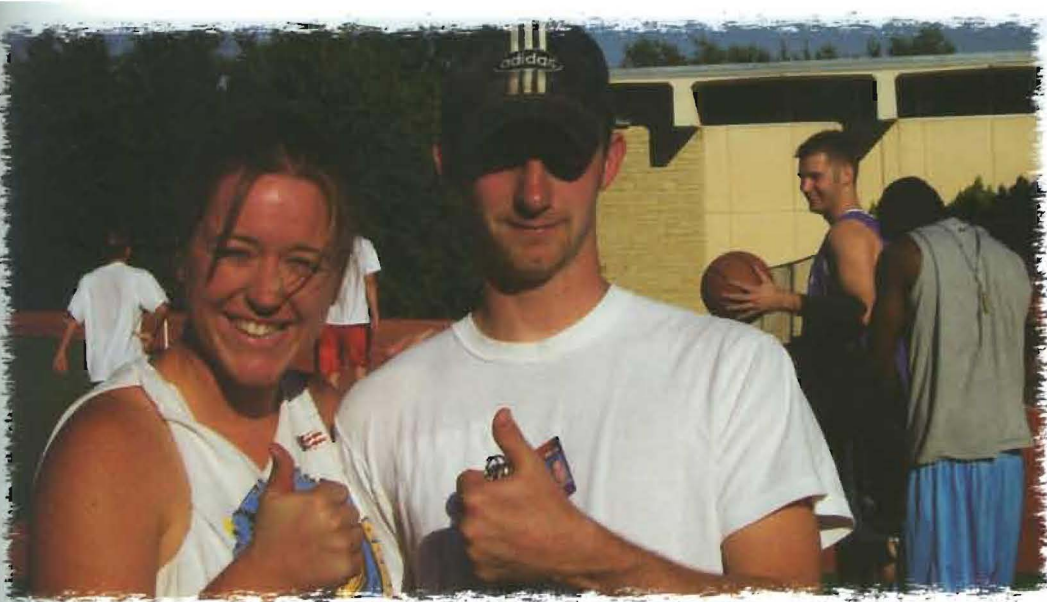

The first Moundbuilders of SC threw pebbles into the Mound, but today painted boulders are added. From The Moundbuilder staff to the football team, the Mound only gets bigger and brighter with time.

Freshman Workday has become a Southwestern College tradition since the mid-1990's. Incoming students spend their first day on campus within the Winfield community, trying to make a difference. The class is divided into groups and spread throughout the town, completing tasks for those in need. For some, it means scaling a ladder to paint a house and for others, it involves yard work. Whatever the job may be, students become acquainted with each other and the community. This tradition, though fairly new, allows students to become leaders through service from their very first day on campus.

The community of Southwestern College, as did the rest of the country, came together in a time for prayer after the September 11th attacks. Drawing upon the college's Methodist tradition, students met in Wroten Hall for an evening Prayer Vigil that same day. Alongside college staff, those who attended voiced their thoughts about an uncertain future for the United States.

Traditions, old and new, have been honored at Southwestern College for years. While they may seem strange or unusual, like building a mountain in Kansas, they allow us to hold onto the past. The connection to what was Southwestern College feeds into the idea of what shall be in the time to come and perhaps we're better Builders because of it.

Although the Southwestern College community gained strength through the pride found in the foundation and traditions of the school, students truly found themselves in their studies. While future teachers attended classes in Center for Teaching Excellence, future biologists and scientists were working within the Beech Science Center. Students in the Liberal Arts department were a part of their own traditions associated with the Darbeth Fine Arts Center.

In the tradition of the Methodist circuit riders, Southwestern College is first and foremost an educational institution. The bond between students and faculty has been and continues to foster a level of learning that keeps dedicated students coming back for more.

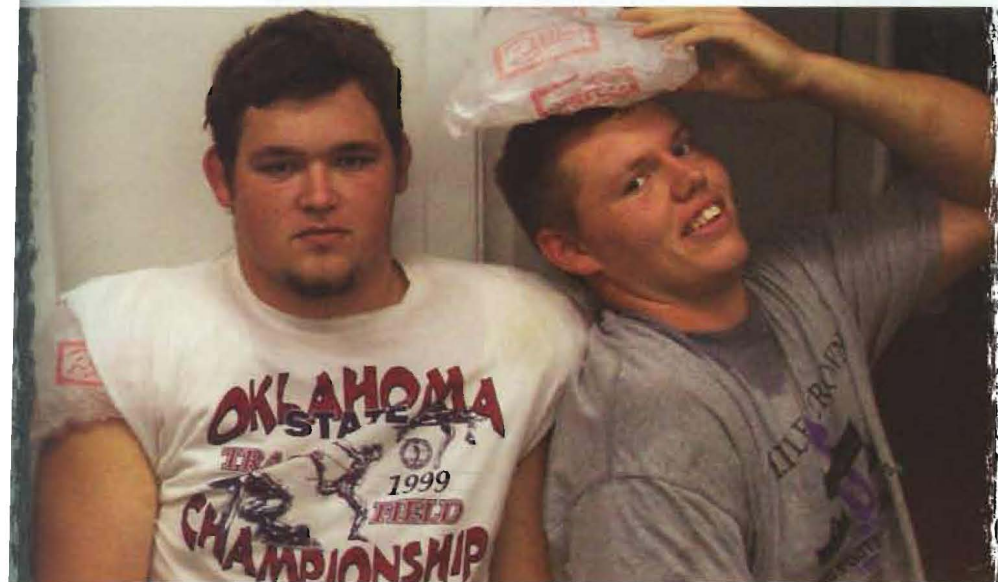

The 2001-2002 school year brought with it a message of the future. The freshman women's dorm opened for new arrivals. At the time of this publication, the building had yet to be named, but was dubbed WORM. WORM was an acronym formed from the first letter in each of the RA's names: Tara Williams, Megan Otto, Lisa Reynolds and Claire Myers.

With the completion of one building, the college continued to build. A sprinkler system was installed in Richardson Auditorium and in the Helen Graham Little Theatre over the December holiday. Mossman Hall, the former science building, underwent a $1.7 million renovation in time for the start of the 2002 school year. The building will house the Business, Psychology and History Departments on the ground level. The second floor will continue to hold the Nursing Department.

The Professional Studies Program of Southwestern College continued to flourish from three off-campus locations. From offices in Winfield and Wichita adult learners with at least 48 credit hours could enroll in a degree completion program through SC. The program took to the web and MBA and Pastoral Studies courses were offered via the internet.

As the college continues to evolve through the 21st Century, a firm grasp on the past reminds us of our roots and directs our future. Whether we were actors settling into a role or athletes chasing our Personal Record, Southwestern College became "home" during this past year. It offered the comforts of a new dorm and the challenges of a higher education. Our relationships with professors opened new doors and the struggles with the administration strengthened our resolve. As a whole, we progressed through the year in our fields of study, while; running track, playing soccer, working on the side, raising children, presenting plays, debating issues and chasing deadlines to put it all in print.

BREAKING ALL THE RULES AND MAKING NEW ONES

By Melanie Jo Hoover

The Student Government Association is continuing the fight for students' rights. Any and all problems that arise on a campus are almost always brought before the SGA. The Student Government Association is a mixed group of students ranging from international students to local townies, freshmen to seniors.

They continue to produce outstanding changes over the entire campus, and yet, still remember to keep it fun! Some the topics that have been brought before the SGA are making efforts to improve lighting on campus to increase a student's feeling of security. Laptops have been discussed, parking predicaments, and reconstructing the organization and layout of the SGA meetings. Efforts are being made to create a more formal and parliamentary procedure format to help increase the productivity of the meetings.

KEEPING IT ACTIVE

By Melanie Jo Hoover

The Student Activities Association consists of a group of nine student officers, as well as Martin Rude and Terry Barnett. This year the SAA has hosted a wide variety of activities for the students. Just to name a few of the events that were sponsored, there was the Midnight Breakfast and Bingo Night, Casino Night, Free Movie Nights, Free Bowling Nights, Wichita Thunder Hockey Night, FAT Friday's, Comedy Night, and most of the entertainment during Fall Frenzy.

These activities serve as stress reducers for students studying rigorously to meet all their deadlines. They also provide a fun way to pass the time for those who procrastinate until the very last minute! All jokes aside, these events serve to develop a sense of community among the students.

"SAA has moved towards better serving the needs of students and is continuing in that direction."

WELCOME TO THE FUNNY FARM

By Julie D. Morgan

They are a small group, but the Moundbuilder staff works hard to produce a memorable book for all Southwestern students to enjoy. Though the year got off to a slow start, the Moundbuilder staff worked diligently to get the book done and sent to Jostens in time for the summer.

The Jostens YearTech program was used for the second year to complete the entire book on the computer. Though there were a few hick-ups, the staff made it through them with flying colors.

"Being a science major, most of what I get out of my classes is conceptual. Working on the yearbook for the last four years has given me physical proof that I have actually done something while I was here," says Heather Jeffery.

The scrapbook theme for this year was spawned by great feelings of nostalgia, and the tremendous popularity of scrapbooking on campus.

This year the Moundbuilder staff was under the direction of Kathy Wilgers and editors Amy Govert-Larson, Nicole Howie, Julie Morgan and Sarah Thuma.

ON A "COLLEGIAN" COURSE

By Julie D. Morgan

The Collegian staff was busy this year stirring up controversy, and keeping the campus well informed of up-coming and past events.

"Newspaper was great this year, and we are looking forward to what is in store for next year as we say good-bye to Kathy and welcome Tod on to our team," says Josh Sears.

The six page publication was designed using Adobe PageMaker, and then it was sent downtown to the Winfield Courier for printing.

Heading up the staff were editors James Larson, Amy Govert-Larson, and Josh Sears. The editors and staff, under the supervision of Kathy Wilgers and with the help of Lois Torrance, made this bi-monthly publication memorable.

"Being in newspaper reminds me of Vietnam--Only here, procrastination is my worst enemy."

TRAINING TO BECOME GREAT TEACHERS!

By Nicole Howie

Once again Education Builders had a great year. During Homecoming weekend, the Education Builders held fun activities for kids to participate in. They also donated books to each of the elementary school libraries in Winfield.

In the spring, Education Builders went through a reorganization stage and remained strong. For their final event of the year, several members of Education Builders got together and performed as Bicker's Band in the Talent/No Talent Show.

LOOKING FORWARD

By Heather Jeffery

The Leadership Southwestern team is an exceptionally productive group. They are key to the planning and carrying out of several events on campus. "The best part of leadership is the team unity. The other members are a lot of fun to work with. And it's nice to know we're doing stuff for others," said second year member Anita Zimmerman. Organized by Cheryl Rude, they are the manpower behind freshmen workday, SC's annual blood drive, The Great Ball Drop, the homecoming parade, and a number of other activities.

"The Leadership team has provided me with the opportunity to meet great people and do wonderful things. As a Senior I can say I am really going to miss it."

FIRST IMPRESSIONS

The Ambassadors are the first people prospective students meet when they come to campus. These individuals are key in attracting new students to SC by providing tours and information to incoming high school students.

"Being an ambassador is a good opportunity to help prospective students. I feel like I'm giving something back to the college," said Ashley Reist.

"Ambassadors is a great way to meet new people, to have great experiences and let people know about the history of the college."

JUST MONKEYING AROUND!

By Sarah Thuma

The Psychology Student Association kicked off the year with an annual barbecue at sponsor, Claudia Geer's house. It was a great event for members to reconnect, to get to know new members, and to plan for the new school year.

This year the club held meetings every other week. These meetings included guest speakers who talked about Psychology related subjects. PSA members, who consist of psychology majors, minors, and other students interested in psychology, worked hard to earn Purple Heart both semesters.

For Homecoming PSA decorated a store front down town. The decorations included a tree trunk and many monkeys to go along with this years theme "Pack Your Trunk, Come Back Have Fun." PSA also created a Homecoming parade float to go along with the theme. One member, Nathan Swink, wore a chimpanzee suit and rode in the trunk of a Volkswagen Beetle. For Thanksgiving, members sold pumpkin bread to raise funds and to donate to Red Cross for the September 11th fund. The Psychology Club Association wrapped up the year with a campus wide guest speaker. In April Allen Gardner, who is famous for his work with chimpanzees, spoke to the Southwestern campus about animal behavior.

This year's officers were: Stacey Strickland; President, Caryn Huslig; Vice President, Kelli Cox; Secretary/Treasurer.

Beta Beta Beta is an organization for undergraduates dedicated to improving the understanding and appreciation of biological studies. The goals of BBB are the promotion of scholarships in biology, spreading knowledge of biology, encouragement of research, and nurturing fellowship among biology students and faculty. "Beta Beta Beta gives its members good opportunities to learn about careers in the biological sciences," explained Kristi Weaver.

Chapter activities include seminars, social and sport activities, and involvement in education and environmental activism. "This year we had our initiation ceremony by candlelight due to the ice storm," said Kari Good.

LIVING THE BIBLE

By Miranda Harris

Discipleship is an organization, and class, that tries to prepare college students to live out their faith in the world in relationship with the local church. "Discipleship has been a great building block in my faith. I absolutely love everyone involved. And I will always try to remember to flash 'em Jesus!" said Kyle Garst.

Discipleship students participate in small covenant groups which meet for two hours each week to study the Bible, pray, and have fellowship. Members also participate in outreach ministries like Keynotes, Praise Band, Selah, Net Techs, World Witness Team, or Mime and Mission. Students are encouraged to enroll in a religion or philosophy class. As Szetho Wei Shen, also known as "Z" said, "You know that rock that the wise man built his house on? Well, I think it was Discipleship!"

TAKING CARE OF BUSINESS

By Miranda Harris

Beta Sigma Alpha is an honorary society designed for the business students of Southwestern College. BSA has been inactive for a few years but is now trying to make a come back. "This is our rebuilding year," said April Tobler, president of the club.

BSA has participated in many activities throughout the year. Beta Sigma Alpha raised money by Bowling for Kids' Sake through the Big Brothers Big Sisters program. They also competed in the 1st Annual Grudge Volleyball match against Beta Beta Beta, sold balloon bouquets for Valentine's Day through their newly acquired Hilltop Balloon Express, and took a tour of the Boeing Corporation in Wichita.

FINDING A VOICE

By Heather Jeffery

Southwestern boasts having a quality debate and forensics team. The program challenges and encourages students to think and be prepared for the future.

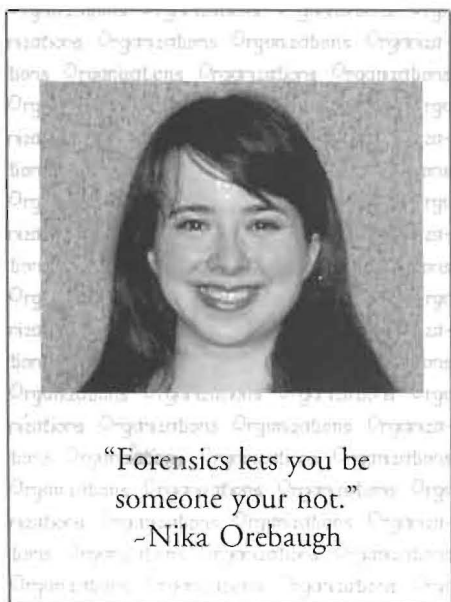

Southwestern is recognized as the host of the first intercollegiate debate tournament and as a leader in helping to promote the national honor fraternity, Pi Kappa Delta.

"Debate and forensics is an opportunity for students to enhance their public speaking skills. This helps them be more confident in their future careers," explained team coach, Tracy Frederick.

CENTER STAGE

By Heather Jeffery

Campus Players is an honorary dramatic society. It's members are students recognized for their talents, dedication, leadership, and vision in theater arts. All theatre events are produced by this organization including the annual Christmas play Eagerheart. This years productions included Marcus is Walking by Joan Ackermann and When Scott Comes Home by Jeff Barker.

"Campus Players represents the foundation of what SC theatre is all about. We put our heads together, make things happen, and above all-we entertain," said member, Adam Maloney.

BUILDING THE PRIDE, KANSAS ZETA CHAPTER

By Keely Monet' Stanley

Phi Delta Theta was founded at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, on December 26, 1848. There are over 173 chapters in the United States and Canada.

The Kansas Zeta Chapter is currently 14 members strong, all of whom take pride in their Founder's Day, April 5, 1995. These men have participated in several activities on and off SC's campus, such as Casino Night, the Bluegrass Festival, and adopting part of Highway 77 for litter control. The most recent project these young men have attempted was getting the SC Trustees to approve a fraternity house on Southwestern's campus.

As the Phi Delta Theta members look back on the years with the Kansas Zeta Chapter at Southwestern, they will remember the relationships that were made while they stood with their chapter. "It was great to be around a group of guys that were committed to helping others," stated Derrick Landwehr-Brown.

SOLIDARITY, SISTERS!

By Elise Eilts

BΣΦ

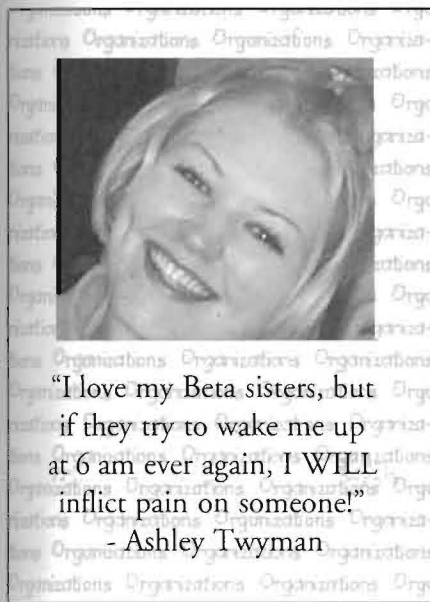

Only one year since becoming a nationally recognized sorority, Beta Sigma Phi has worked toward their goal of service around the area. Last year, the sorority held a hat drive for chemotherapy patients as well as a canned food drive. This year, the sorority helped set up an informative meeting about date rape for all students. Beta Sigma Phi co-sponsors the winter formal each year. "The ice pond was a real challenge, but I could tell from everyone's reactions that it was the best pond ever, and Steph and I should be proud of the many hours of hard work we put into it," said Carrie Bloedel.

The sorority isn't just about decorating for a dance. Friendships that are formed between the members cannot be imitated. "I joined the sorority to meet new people and experience the college life completely, but I am going to leave with much, much more. I am leaving with a new sense of what the word 'sister' can mean. I love my sisters and I wish them all the stars in the sky," said Rose Mans. The sense of sisterhood is strong in each of the members. "My experience with Beta has been a fulfilling one for me. It has helped me to get to know others better and now they are like my family away from home," said Rebecca Womble.

CRAAMP! DISLOCATION! CALL THE TRAINERS.

By Kathy Wilgers

Taking care of athlete injuries is a full time job for the Athletic Trainers. Standing on the sidelines, prepared for any emergency, seems to be what these students live for.

As one of the fastest growing programs at SC, the Athletic Training program prepares students for the National Athletic Trainers' Association Board of Certification exam making them nationally certified.

The program is led by Brian Norton, MS ATC (Director of Athletic Training Education), Lisa Braun, ATC-R (Director of Clinical Education), and Kevin Warner, AT-R (Graduate Assistant).

The SC Athletic Training faculty and staff are proud to provide certified and professional allied health care to our student athletes. GO BUILDERS!

NEEDLES AND SYMPATHY

By Kathy Wilgers

The Southwestern College Association of Student Nurses, SCANS, assists students in the nursing program to see what nursing outside of the classroom is all about. The members form strong friendships and to make contacts in the nursing world.

One of the highlights of the year was when several members participated in a mission trip to Mexico over Spring Break. Fundraising, community service, speakers, participation in the Homecoming parade, and field trips keep the organization a vital part of the nursing program.

THEY ARE EVERYWHERE

By Julie D. Morgan

The Mass Communications Department has had a busy year trying to keep up with campus life. While trying to catch every special moment on radio, on video, in pictures and in print, the students made sure to stay involved in campus activities.

There are many parts to the Mass Communications Department including SCTV, KSWC, the Moundbuilder and the Collegian.

SCTV is the television part of this department. This includes the bi-weekly television show, This Week at Southwestern College, which features campus news and events; and SCMagazine, the campus documentary show which focuses on points of interest related to the Winfield community and surrounding area.

Another big part of the department is the campus radio station, KSWC 100.3 FM, which has been a working part of campus for 34 years. KSWC is a 10watt station that broadcasts across the campus and Winfield community. Every DJ spent a three-hour shift, each week, on the air taking requests and playing 15 songs off of the "KSWC Top 30 Playlist." Office personnel and management of KSWC included: Dr. Bill DeArmond (General Manager), Levi Hillman (Station Manager), Lydia Mann (Assistant Station Manager), Amy Govert-Larson (Production Manager), Brett Prothro (Program Manager), and Sarah Edwards (Assistant Program Manager).

PLAYING AND PRAISING

By Elise Eilts

FCA's mission: Present to athletes and coaches, and all whom they influence, the challenge and adventure of receiving Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord, serving Him in their relationships and in the fellowship of the church.

Not just for athletes anymore, FCA is an organization meant to provide an opportunity for fellowship. "It's a wonderful place where Christians feel welcome to worship together," said senior Lisa Reynolds, senior. All students are welcome to attend meetings.

Through various games and lessons given by students, attendees are given the chance to refresh their relationship with God. "At FCA we have a great time with many different kinds of students fellowshiping together," said sophomore Claire Myers. Lessons given by students inspire and comfort the listeners who might be going through a similar situation. Testimonies are shared along with life lessons learned through experiences. Joys and concerns are shared with the group before the closing prayer.

With strong lessons and games involving racing around Pound's Lounge like crazy people, students leave FCA excited about life and God. A connection of a common faith is formed within the group and continued beyond the walls of Pound's Lounge.

"FCA is a great place to fellowship with other Christians. My favorite part is when we circle up to pray and we close singing 'Sanctuary.'"

SINGING OUT TO THE WORLD

By Elise Eilts

Between the classes of the average college experience lays activity in the guise of another class. Choir might take up the normal student lunch hour, but where else would someone get the opportunity to sing every weekday and go on tour? The choir toured western Kansas in addition to the performances for the community and school. "Last year we went to Texas. This year we were supposed to go to Europe, but we got to stay in Kansas. Is there a trend forming?" laughed Ross Baker.

PLAYING OUR SONG

By Elise Eilts

The music department at Southwestern was busy this year. The concert band and jazz band had several cameo appearances at various events while the pep band found its way into nearly all sporting events. In addition to their own concerts, the band added its own style of music to the Music Extravaganza. The jazz band performed at the Honors Convocation, among other instances.

I SWEAR TO TELL THE TRUTH

By Julie D. Morgan

The Student Law Association is only a few years old, and has kept a low pitch on campus this year. The organization is associated with the Pre-Law program, a fairly new program on campus.

This year the pre-law kick off was celebrated in the SC Memorial Library. Several alumni lawyers, area attorneys, prospective students, and the President of the Kansas Bar Association, James Bush, helped to celebrate the event.

The Advisory council for the group includes professors Barbara Corvette, Jason Coy, Dan Daniels, Tracy Frederick, Phil Schmidt, and Andy Sheppard.

"I feel that the Student Law Association will be a valuable asset to SC students."

ROUSING THE CROWD

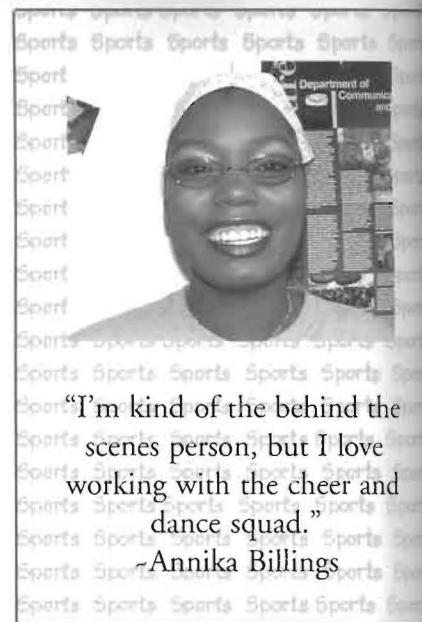

By Heather Jeffery

This year's squad got a new look. New uniforms arrived during the basketball season and even the Jinx was updated. Basketball season also saw the addition of two new yell leaders. One thing that remained constant was the practicing.

The squad met everyday to run, lift weights and practice new routines. In addition to practice they participated in community service activities such as helping with the DARE program and holding a youth cheer clinic. "The girls are very talented and have a huge heart for cheering. I think they're great," said squad member Claire Myers.

STAYING IN STEP

By Heather Jeffery

Spectators of Southwestern's home football and basketball games have enjoyed performances by the Black Cats dance team. SC's dance team is composed of students from different backgrounds and majors who love to dance.

The squad participates in a wide range of activities to promote school spirit. Every year they paint a rock and join in the Moundbuilding ceremony. They are part of the Homecoming parade and perform at special events like the tailgate party and the Homecoming bonfire.

"The season as a whole went well. It's always great to get a couple of new girls who are enthusiastic and full of new ideas. I love how close we all got throughout the year and I am really looking forward to our next fall season," said Alyssa Hoffman.

"We started the season with a new coach and a great team. This made the season both challenging and rewarding in many ways."

ON THE JOB

By Elise Eilts

The year 2001 marked the 10th anniversary of Freshmen Work Day, a day meant to not only help the community, but to encourage students to serve others. Each of the 15 crews met with their leaders and the faculty member or alumni for breakfast bright and early Saturday morning, then set out to their respective worksites. "I thought it was a very good beginning. It has a great purpose," said Hannah Judson, freshman. Tasks ranged from fixing fences to peeling wallpaper to painting houses. As simple as these tasks sound, they proved to be more complicated than first thought. "Word of advice: if you ever have 10,000 year old wallpaper on your walls, don't remove it," said Monica Morrison, freshman, remembering the difficulty of the job.

There were also the unavoidable accidents as well that later became jokes. "Don't stand on the top of ladders. You'll fall off and hurt your knee," said Caleb Mondragon, freshman. "No one knows my name, they just know I fell off a ladder."

After the long day's work, the freshman class cleaned up then attended a banquet at Baden Square. Several homeowners attended with the crews that worked for them. Each of the crews elected one person to be their spokesperson to report about their day. Following the banquet, the freshmen had the first break since they arrived at Southwestern.

Rock Painting

ROCKIN' PARTY

By Sarah Thuma

Rocks of assorted sizes littered the lawn of Wallingford the evening of the rock painting party. Armed with Q-tips and paint brushes, the Southwestern community attacked the rocks with imaginative decorations. This year's rock painters were very creative. The cheerleading squads' rock dawned glitter and bows. A few people from Oklahoma decorated a rock in the shape of their home state. They painted it red and white and wrote their initials to mark where they were from. The girls soccer team painted their rock like a soccer field. Senior goalie Beth "Crash" Barbiers said, "Rock Painting is a great tradition at SC, it really brings the campus together. However, it wasn't the same this year without Dan the Man." SAA provided tunes, Rocky Road ice cream, and beverages for the students to enjoy.

Moundbuilding Ceremony

ROCK PILE

By Sarah Thuma

This year's traditional Moundbuilding Ceremony began in the Richardson auditorium. The ceremony helped inform newcomers about the traditions of the Mound. The term "Moundbuilder" originated in 1910, and the ceremony started in 1927. The ceremony served as celebration where the Southwestern community celebrated the growth of the college. This year, a slide show presented all of the rocks that organizations have placed around Southwestern's campus over the years. After the ceremony in Richardson, students, alumni, faculty and friends descended the 77 with fast moving rain clouds over head. Sprinkles cooled the crowd as they surrounded the Mound. This year students and friends were asked to place their rocks on the backside of the mound because the front side is beginning to pile up. Campus organizations were introduced as they placed their rocks on the Mound. Afterwards, the rest of the Southwestern community was invited to place their rocks. The addition of each stone symbolized Southwestern's strength and growing success.

"As a senior, this was my last Moundbuilding Ceremony. There was a sadness to it, but also a feeling of pride in SC and being able to be a part of it's rich history and deeply rooted traditions."

THE JINX COMES OUT AT NIGHT

By Keely Monet' Stanley

Out with the old and in with the new! Southwestern kicks off the first week of the school year with exciting events presented by the Student Activity Association, SAA. The purpose of this entertaining week is to provide an opportunity to meet new people outside of the classroom. All of the students participated in a variety of activities such as the Jinx Dance, Carnival, and Kick Back Day.

The week kicked off with the biggest school dance of the year, The Jinx Dance, located at the bottom of the 77 steps. All of the smooth cats came out that night to dance the night away with the hottest DJ out of Wichita. This year's dance was a night to remember. SAA had refreshments and cool give away prizes such as a DVD Player. "It was fun to come back and see new faces after a lonely summer," stated Lindsay Nusz.

This year's carnival was another explosive event. When the students walked down King Drive and saw it covered with swings, the sizzler, and a ferris wheel, they were thrown for a loop and taken for a ride. This year SC offered the Cow Race as an alternative to those students who don't like the rides. In the meantime, SAA once again provided refreshments and great giveaway prizes. "Don't come knockin' when the Ferris Wheel is a Rockin'," was a tip from Marathana Furches.

Kick Back Day was another grand success. This was an intense day for a lot of the SC students who grouped up with their teams for a game of mud volleyball. The competition began for the ultimate prize of free pizza from Gambino's. By the end of the night the war had died down to only a few teams. In spite of all the hard work, only two teams were able to make it to the top. The winners of this dirty war were the Phi Delta Theta fraternity, and a group of SC students who call themselves "Dirty Sanchez". After the games were all over, the teams took a long droopy walk to the water sprinklers to wash away the fun. "We had a really fun time, and I really liked playing in the mud," stated Rachel Stueve.

Winter Formal

WINTER WONDERLAND

By Melanie Jo Hoover

The weather outside was not quite as frightful as it should have been for mid-December. However, this was greatly appreciated by the many students who attended this winter celebration. Upon entering the gym through the garden-gate, you could see the spirit of the holiday was upon you.

White PE was transformed into a winter wonderland, complete with an old stlye ice skating rink. Fluffy snow lay upon the ground. All was aglitter with lights, ice, snow, and the breathtaking outfits. Beta Sigma Phi did an excelent job of decorating for the formal. Many turned out to enjoy the festivities. Dancers were entertained in the gazebo, while onlookers found the dining area to be enjoyable. Guests were served a favorite dish of the SAA: animal crackers! Grape and cherry slush appeared to be the choice beverage for the majority of the students.

Due to some scheduling conflicts, two of SC's students, Levi Hillman and Randall Walz provided the DJ services.

A LUAV WITHOUT THE BEACH

By Elise Eilts

Beta Sigma Phi and SAA worked together to provide a break from studying before finals. Amid tiki torches and beach balls, students relaxed in several ways. Some students danced to the music, others played in the sand, while still others simply chilled.

The mood for fun was set with beach toys and food. "We had sand pits for people to build stuff in and beach balls in the sand. We had a lot of fun decorating for it," said Ashley Twyman. Students took advantage of the chance to play before settling down to the seriousness of life once again.

Sweetheart Dance

MUSIC, CANDY AND GOOD TIMES

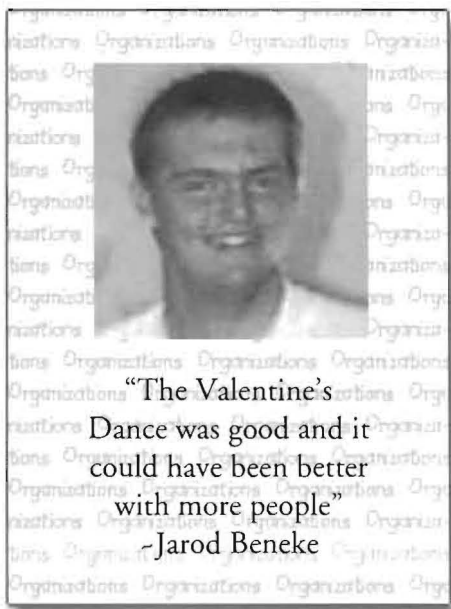

By Melanie Jo Hoover

The Sweetheart Dance was hosted by SAA. Gabe Hughes, student, served as the DJ, providing energetic moods for the close group of friends who gathered to celebrate "Singles Awareness Day," Saint Valentine's Day. The role of "Welcomer" was taken by Josiah Chieng. The most interesting couple of the night was certainly Bret Bement and his famous plunger. One of the most talented twosomes of the night went to Jarod Beneke and Carina McGowan. Several times these two demonstrated the proper way to swing dance.

Other special entertainment was provided by Szetho Wei Shen, better known as "Z" on campus. "Z" is well known for his techno-dance moves. Line dances were the most popular dance of the evening. Everyone agreed that the dance was a blast.

IT TAKES TALENT TO HAVE NO TALENT

By Melanie Jo Hoover

It is impressive how much skill the students at SC possess. Even the No Talent entries gave outstanding performances. The audience was entertained by a wide array of talents and lack thereof through the show. Host Gabe Hughes kept the crowd riveted throughout the night.

Talents and No Talents were equally entertaining. The No Talent individuals ranged from hand-eye coordination with penny whistles to an impersonation of Michael Jackson to the Lisa Loeb performance. The Talent individuals showed everything from a Hindu song to a Karate demonstration. Group No Talent kept the audience rolling with a mix of what Ali Wait called "biology nerdiness," to Campus Players' theatrical master to a brief instruction on how to become a man. This all just goes to show how crazy college students can be after almost an entire semester of studying!
