Crossroads

During life, everyone encounters CROSSROADS. For many, one of the most difficult journeys begins in college. This is a point in life where young men and women become adults, where people find out who they are deep down inside, and where they meet the people who will become their greatest friends.

These CROSSROADS are not always easy. Here we stand watching our friends and family change. People close to us graduate, move away, get married, have children, and die. For several years, these people are the ones with which we share the good and the bad times.

Many students have attended Southwestern briefly, but made lasting impressions on those left behind. Some have had internships and taken mission trips to other countries while others have held down full time jobs and raised families while taking a full class load.

Whether it is only a memory of hanging out with friends in the Cafeteria or in the halls of the dorm during a power outage, Southwestern College will be a part of our lives forever.

COLLEGE CROSSROADS

Which College is right for me? Eenie, Menie, Minie, Mo!

I'm supposed to fit all of my stuff in this little room?!
I haven't shared a room since I was 2!

You call this food! I miss my mom's cooking!

I have to have this 20 page paper done by when?
Oh well, I can wait till tomorrow to start.

What should I do? My toilet is clogged!
Surely my R.A.'s awake at 3:30am.

What should I do with my life? What, I can't major in video gaming.

I have how many more finals to study for by tomorrow morning?
Coffee...I need Coffee!!

Yeah! It's summer!
How many weddings do I have to be in this year?

Do I really want to go to class today?
My bed is screaming my name!

Do these jeans make my butt look big? I've heard about the freshman 15, but this is more like the freshman 50!!

Where's my laptop? Oh, yeah I threw it out the window.

So I have this degree, now what?

Crossroads

Many times we hear people talk about "the college experience." Here at Southwestern students learn first hand what this phrase means. College is a time of change or coming to a CROSSROAD in life. It doesn't matter how old you are or what your background is, college is an experience that effects who you are.

Professors and fellow students expand ones knowledge and promote ones personal growth. This growth may take form in a late night discussion with a roommate, an indepth conversation in class, deciding on an internship in a far away location, or pulling an all nighter studying for a big test.

As we fly through these CROSSROADS in our lives, one makes wonderful memories. Students should take time to stop and savor these times before they are over. Hopefully, while looking through this yearbook, they will be reminded of the good times they had a Southwestern College, and how special these memories truly are.

The Road Less Traveled

College is all about changes some big, some small. People face big decisions during this time in their life such as which college to attend, to stay at home or move away, what major to choose, where to live, or who to marry.

It is a time in your life when you come to many CROSSROADS.

-Miranda Harris

When I look back over the past couple of years many good times are brought to mind. Tennis meers, football, and basketball games, free movie and bowling nights, late night bingo, the Moundbuilding ceremonies, and homecoming. Here I have had good times and bad but one thing is for sure, I have grown and learned a lot.

Southwestern has been everything I had hoped it would be and more. I will cherish all my memories I have made at this college forever.

-Rachel Ferguson

College is supposed to prep us for when our CROSSROAD to the next chapter of our life comes up.

Many years before that CROSSROAD, we experience those "high school screw around years." The road we take after college should bring us to the over-anticipated "take the world and put it in your pocket years." Although I still haven't decided when I want to take that road into the real world, I'm having the time of my life right now trying to decide when to take it.

College Memories

By Lisa Broberg

Long road trips with the volleyball team
 Making Easy Mac at 2 am
 Playing in the Rain.
 Fitting a dorm room into the elevator in prank wars.
 Looking at the stars from the Water tower park merry-go-round.
 Decorating the hall for Halloween and Christmas.
 Locking people in the Broadhurst bathrooms.
 Playing Dress-up before class presentations,
 Running down College Street in the ice storm when the power goes out.
 Climbing in the window when we forget our keys,
 Road trips in the middle of the night to random destinations.

Jumping on mattresses in the first floor lobby,
 Almost killing our fish while rearranging our dorm room.
 Throwing outrageous Birthday Parties,
 Locking our suit mates out of their room,
 Calling random people from the facebook,
 Throwing "The List" out the window,
 Going ice-skating with 20 of our best friends.
 Singing at the top of our lungs,
 Staying up all night to write leadership papers.
 Climbing in the Ghetto-mat dryers.
 Going to concerts with friends.
 Walking to the coffee shop,
 Playing capture the flag and scaring Levi.

Talking all night long with your roommate.
 Risking my life sledding on the iced ramp
 Getting up at the butt-crack of dawn to go to practice.
 Bagels and Banana's (I need not say more),
 Playing in the leaves by Mossman.
 Having snowball fights in front of WORM
 The scooter escapades.
 Free Bowling Nights
 Road Trips to Oxford.
 Writing GO (Insert Name of High school) on everyone's car windows
 Going to Chapel every Wednesday.

Doing the Happy Dance with Lauren on the way back from the cafeteria
 Working out in the Lobbies late at night.
 Water warfare.
 Seeing our Broadhurst room and thinking how are we ever going to fit all this in here.
 Playing softball with Tephy behind the Tennis courts.
 Playing Truth or Dare Jinga.
 Shopping in Wichita.
 Valentines Day Surprises.
 Throwing dishes out the window.
 Pulling all nighters when you don't even have homework.

Having water frog wars...OH BOY
 The unidentifiable smells in Wallingford.
 Playing Vice City in Leeper's room.
 Morse code on the walls of Broadhurst.
 Working at Little Builders.
 Doing Volley Ball laundry with Amy
 Going to football games.
 Learning that Ketchup, Mustard and Peanut Butter don't come off cars easily.
 Super bowl parties
 Making wax hands.
 Swimming in White P.E.
 Playing pool at Jakes.
 Winning the Picture Scavenger hunt.

Taking friends snipe hunting and almost hitting a black cow on the way.
 Talking with our RA about all of our problems.
 Applying for A Makeover Story.
 Making fun of infomercials.
 Teaching people how to blow spit bubbles.
 Playing the cup game at volleyball tournaments.
 Winning absolutely nothing at Bingo.
 Having our two favorite RA's get homecoming queen.
 Making toothbrush bracelets.
 Playing softball intramurals with the guy's cross-country team and the girl's soccer team.
 Making Lifelong Friendships.

Landmarks

from the Journey

The Southwestern College journey begins with registration in the Christy Administration building. This landmark continues to be a place of importance for students throughout their college careers. Christy contains administrative offices, classrooms, student publications, the radio and TV station, Richardson Auditorium, and the Helen Graham Little Theatre.

Traditions are strong at Southwestern. The legend of the Jinx plaque, donated by the class of 1958, is passed on from current to new students over the years. Students avoid bad luck by steering clear of the plaque, which is located on the 77 steps leading up to Christy.

FORK IN THE ROAD

By Lisa Broberg

The Student Government Association has been through many changes this year. They re-structured their meetings, going from weekly to monthly meetings. The re-vamping included having senators be elected to their position instead of having representatives from each club on campus. The student government kept busy throughout the year helping to improve campus life. SGA campus events included the moundbuilding ceremony and the activity fair.

MAPPING THE YEAR

By Lisa Broberg

SAA has improved greatly this year compared to last. They had many new events taking place along with the old ones. The usual bowling and free movie night, and bingo have still played a big part in SAA.

This year, however, they put on something different. Every Thursday night they have a special event planned, from dancing to crafts.

After asking Beth Parker what she thought of Thursday Night Live, she stated that, "the activities are fun and a good contribution to the on campus activities."

WORK IN PROGRESS

by Elise Eilts

Each year a small group of students has taken on the challenge of freezing memories in book form. The Moundbuilder staff had twelve hard working students throughout the year under the supervision of a new advisor Tod Megredy and co-editors Nicole Howie, Julie Morgan and Sarah Thuma.

Work nights in the guise of pizza parties helped the staff beat the never ending deadlines to produce the 92 volume of the Southwestern College Moundbuilder yearbook.

"I'm tired of being broke down at a #%& &#%@ cross road!"

DEADLINE AHEAD

By Elise Eilts

The student voice of Southwestern College gave students the opportunity to share their opinions with the rest of the world, or at least the rest of the campus. Letters to the editor and guest columnists added a variety of reading to the Collegian. Stories varied from world wide concerns to reactions to various topics to guest speakers on campus to complaints about the campus. Each article published was open for rebuttal through a letter to the editor.

However, the number of letters does not always exceed the need. The staff held work nights to meet their deadlines in order to bring the paper to the campus community every two weeks.

"Newspaper is not for slackers. We have deadlines and we meet them. Usually," said Dusti Fansler, who worked as an editor on the staff.

"I like the journalistic experience I get from working on the Collegian staff. Monkeys!"

LOOK BOTH WAYS

By Lisa Broberg

The Education Builders had another great year. They started off homecoming weekend by doing many fun and exciting activities with kids from the area schools. Every other week the Education Builders met with each other to discuss upcoming events. Occasionally they had different speakers who would talk about styles of teaching.

"Ed Builders is a good time for all education majors to come together and talk about educational issues."

TRAVELING AROUND THE WORLD

By Lisa Broberg

The International Club aims to share the culture and values of different countries. Every year they host a dinner or luncheon to have fellowship with students, faculty, and their host parents. The host families help the students feel at home since they are so far away.

The club offers different experiences and benefits for each member. "I really enjoy being in the International Club because I feel a sense of unity when I am around people from other wonderful countries," said Andrew Singh.

FOLLOW THE LEADER

Leadership Southwestern has a vision and common goals, but the very heart of our leadership team is service. Every project that they complete, every lesson that they learn, and every act they pursue is oriented towards servant leadership. Leadership continually seeks opportunities to serve, and because they understand that ultimate purpose as a team, they achieve far beyond any great individual achievement.

This year's leadership group remained active and involved on campus, as well as in the community. They sold pies as a fundraiser at the Walnut Valley Bluegrass Festival. They also participated in the Homecoming Parade. Several members also created individual projects that benefited not only Southwestern but the surrounding communities. Leadership traveled to Ireland to complete community projects.

"Leadership Southwestern adds a rewarding service oriented experience to the generally self-centered life of a college student."

LEADING THE WAY

By Rachel Ferguson

The Ambassadors are very important people who take the time to show perspective students and their families around the college. The Ambassadors are sometimes the first SC students a perspective student meets. Therefore, it is very crucial that the Ambassadors work hard and always keep a positive attitude.

"I've really enjoyed getting to know perspective students and then seeing them on campus the next year. It's a good feeling to be a representative of Southwestern" says Erin Eis.

MAPPING THE BRAIN

By Sarah Thuma

A larger membership with many new students proved successful year for the Psychology Student Association. PSA is open to any students who are interested in the field of Psychology, especially those who are majoring or minoring in the field. Members started off the year with a large turn out for the annual Barbecue. For the Homecoming parade, students created a DNA inspired float. Money was raised, to send Psychology majors to a research conference, by making cookies for Halloween. Students also collected supplies for a primate sanctuary. PSA hosted several guest speakers throughout the year.

BUSINESS BEFORE PLEASURE

By Anthony Jurmaine McKissic

Beta Sigma Alpha is an honor society for students that major in bussiness. The members got more than what is learned in the classroom, they recieve outside experience. They took field trips and had guest speakers that are bussiness professionals. Brandon Mayberry said that his favorite speaker was Mike Jones. Mike Jones gave him information about getting and keeping a job. Members will use this information for their future career. This group really put bussiness before pleasure.

PLEASE DON'T FEED THE ANIMALS

By Jason Kearns

Beta Beta Beta is the biology club at Southwestern. It is designed to help undergraduates in their study of Biology. The Delta Chapter at Southwestern meets every other Tuesday evening at seven o'clock. The club holds seminars, field trips, and other social and sporting events.

During the fall semester, Tri-Beta placed third in the homecoming float contest with a model of DNA. It was the first time in five years that they did not win first place. Also, Tri-Beta started a new fund raiser, the Jinxing. A profit of around $500 dollars was made. Tri-Beta also helped with clean-up at the Dutch Creek field station, took several field trips in and out of state, and held its annual student vs. faculty volleyball and softball games.

PHANTASTIC PHYSICS ON LIFE'S PHREEWAY

By Elise Eilts

Along with the Southwestern physics department, the Society of Physics Students has been growing in numbers. More students are interested in the physical sciences and are gaining more than just a higher grade. "Physics is fun," said Matt Douglas. The Society of Physics Students is open to all students who are interested in physics, regardless of major.

The society also helps physics majors by showing them several different paths. During the year, the club takes trips to area corporations to witness physics professionals in action. These trips not only give the students a chance to learn from each other, they also answer the big question, "So, now that I have a physics degree, what do I do with it?"

Below: Physics students enjoy food as they regroup for the upcoming school year. The picnic has become an annual event. (photo special to the Moundbuilder)

Between the trips and study sessions, the club spends time enjoying the effects of physics in the world. "You can study and work as hard as you want as long as you remember to plan time for fun too," said Ben Carden. This club has combined physics and fun for a group of crazy students.

"We have an outstanding physics department here at Southwestern!"

RULES OF THE ROAD

The Student Law Association is a club that provides many different opportunities to its members. Members looked for internships together and had study sessions for the LSAT. SLA also invited speakers to their meetings to teach them more about their field of study.

NOT QUITE A DEAD END

By Elise Eilts

A new club at Southwestern, Dead Poets Society began with the idea that poetry is the best way to learn about and appreciate life. Discussion following a poem's reading opened ideas of all areas of living from love to anger to understanding another's point of view. "Your education has been a failure, no matter how learned you are, if it has failed to open your heart," said Bret Bement.

The poets met twice a month in Pounds Lounge, then roamed around campus, carrying their candles and books, to find the perfect spot for that night's topic and inspiration. "We're really a bunch of tree hugging hippies," said Ben Rivers.

"DPS is a place I like to go because of all the things I do, this is the one I really look forward to. We play with words and thoughts and have fun."

DON'T ARGUE ABOUT DIRECTIONS

By Elise Eilts

What better way to see the country than from behind a podium? During the year, the debate and forensics squad traveled to various tournaments to show their best talent. Traveling helped the teammates bond. "We spend far too much time together in small confined places," said Megan Otto.

These road trips resulted in great times, awards, and memories to last a lifetime. "I don't know how we're such a small squad. I can't imagine what could be more fun than spending your weekend on long road trips with us, taking pictures with giant penguins, and playing Joey's favorite road game, 'Turn Here,'" said Amanda Bennett.

Working together to improve their skills gave them an excuse to spend even more time together. Sage advice comes from the team's experienced coach, "Don't ever listen to Patrick," joked Tracy Frederick.

"I don't need any evidence! I know what I'm talking about!"

RUNNING IN THE ROAD

By Elise Eilts

Part of growing in a relationship with God is spending time with other Christians. Fellowship of Christian Athletes provided that opportunity to students. Between the silly games and singing worship songs, students shared devotions, spiritual experiences, and life lessons to help others grow in their faith. "I've never had discussion about God and what he's doing in people's lives is that is as open and honest as with the people of FCA," said Jake Steventon.

DON'T PLAY IN THE STREET

New to the campus this year, Nurses Christian Fellowship is comprised of students and community nurses who wish to find spiritual support in their work. An average meeting consisted of a formal devotion or a lesson shared by a willing member. The Nurses Christian Fellowship will continue to grow in the future to include more community nurses.

The group cited Proverbs 17:22 as their founding verse: "A cheerful heart is a good medicine, but a downcast spirit dries up the bones." They work within hospitals to reach out to patients and use their gift of a healing touch and smile. "God is good, there's always time for God. There are two important things in life: God and laughter," said Lexi Silvers, president.

"As a nurse, God has given us all something special to give to our patients."

THE DRAMA ALONG LIFE'S HIGHWAY

By Julie Morgan

Campus Players is a honorary theatre society at Southwestern. The society consists of students who excel in the theatre department.

The Students involved in this honorary society help put on the many theatre productions throughout the year. These students participate in Saturday workdays where they complete such projects as raking leaves around town, and doing set design work.

"This year was very fun and exciting for me. I cannot wait to come back and work on the upcoming plays."

Highway 54

By Anthony McKissic

Phi 54 Phi is the newest fraternity on Southwestern's campus. The name Phi 54 Phi came from the first black regiment to fight in the Civil War for the United States.

Having fun and helping other people is the main purpose of Phi 54 Phi. This brotherhood held fund raisers, helped the poor, and tried to make Southwestern College's campus as fun as possible. "The most fun I have ever had at Southwestern was at this year's Halloween party held by 54," said James Brannon.

"It is finally nice to be in a group where I am accepted and don't always feel that I am being looked at by my peers as different. I really had a good time this year with Phi 54 Phi."

Highway Clean-up

By Rachel Ferguson

The Kansas Zeta chapter currently has 16 members in its fraternity. Phi Delta Theta had an exciting year full of events. It held video game nights, bowling nights and an intense game of water polo.

Kansas Zeta held this year's annual South Central Kansas Founders Day. Kansas Zeta also hosted the 2003 Golf Scramble. It took part in its annual trash pick-up as well as the campus wide Casino Night. Phi Delta Theta participated in Big Brothers Bowling where it raised more than $200 dollars along with winning the award for best-dressed.

Warren Bergquist and Vince DeGrado were nominated for Educational Foundations through the fraternity totaling, $7,000. "I am proud to be with a group of men who are bound by the same ethics and principles as myself," said Derrick Landwehr-Brown.

STOPPING TO SMELL THE ROSES

By Rachel Ferguson

Beta Sigma Phi has had a busy year sponsoring and participating in events. Over the past year, with the help of sponsor Jill Megredy, they put on the Luau and the Winter Formal, with the theme of Candyland. Beta also participated in the homecoming parade and Last Chance To Be A Stud Jock Day, sponsored by SAA.

In the spring the girls entered the Talent/No Talent Show, with the Phi Delt's and performed to "Summer Lovin" from the Grease soundtrack, and won the competition.

Over the year many close friendships were formed. "This year we made a lot of strides to make our sorority better. In the meantime, good friendships were formed," said Tara Revell.

"Beta Sigma Phi creates a sisterhood that is shared between all active individuals on the campus."

The Discipleship program is a society of students who make it a point to mix school life with spirituality. These students are dedicated to living their social lives as strong Christian role models for other students. The four Discipleship groups, one for each class year, met for fellowship, Bible study, and prayer. Team member Megan McClellan says, "Being on the Discipleship team really kept me focused on Christ."

BROADCASTING ZONE

By Rachel Ferguson

Mass communications includes several groups at Southwestern: the Moundbuilder, the Collegian, KSWC, SCTV and SC Magazine. Over the last year the mass communications department began renovating the program. The Mass Communications department began the fall semester under the direction of Tom Jacobs.

The major will split into five categories beginning in the fall: Radio/Television Production & Performance, Journalism, New Media, Communication Studies, and General Communication. Under the new guidelines, the students have the option to not choose an emphasis area and custom-build their own majors. Also, the lower level Christy was renovated, and a new computer lab and lounge were added for the Mass Communication and computer science students.

Another crossroad in communications is the campus radio station, KSWC 100.3 FM. Each DJ is in charge of a three hour shift in the radio station each week. They must play 15 songs off a playlist. However, for the spring semester KSWC management decided to try something new. Six students volunteered to begin the Breakfast Club, a morning show held every Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday from 7 to 9 am.

PERFORMING AT A CROSSROAD

EVENTS

RAINED OUT

by Lindsey Harold

This year's Freshmen Workday started off like any other. All of the freshmen were awakened early in the morning, some by their resident assistants and some on their own. They proceeded to the cafeteria for their first official meal as college students. There they were informed which crew they would be on for the day.

However, half-way through breakfast, Freshmen Workday coordinator Ann Chartier approached the podium and made the announcement that because of the inclement weather, all work was cancelled and rescheduled for a later date. Many freshman silently cheered but there were those who were disappointed about not getting to be a part of this unique bonding experience.

"As happy as I was about getting to sleep in, I was looking forward to meeting new people besides those just in my dorm," Cassie Button said.

Despite the cancellations, Chartier is still optimistic about next year's Freshmen Workday.

"Next year's Freshman Workday is being planned just as every other year has, and is under new leadership with sophomores Alison Ebright and Amanda Ginther. We are, of course, hoping that there will not be any rain. I have a very positive outlook that next year will go as good as this year. This year we did not have any complaints about any of the work, and the homeowners were incredibly appreciative of us following through on our commitment to them. I am appreciative of those who gave a day or two to help us finish this project," Chartier said.

"To be honest, I was happy that freshmen workday was cancelled because it allowed me to get some much needed sleep as I was up really late the night before."

CAUTION WET PAINT

By Sarah Thuma

On the evening of August 28th, a large group of people carrying cans of spray paint were spotted on the lawn of Wallingford Hall. "Unlawful vandalism?" Not exactly. Yes, there was an out of control party on the lawn on that evening, but it was only a rock painting party.

Southwestern College students and friends came to this gathering with specially picked rocks in tow. SAA provided a multitude of paint, beverages, and rocky road ice cream. Students and organizations used their creativity to put a personal touch on their rocks. The athletic trainers rock was complete with adhesive bandages and the cheerleaders' rock was decked out in ribbons. The football and ladies' basketball team went with the idea that bigger is better, and created massive rocks. The rocky road ice cream didn't last long with the large crowd that attended this year, but the good times had that evening will be remembered.

WATCH FOR FALLING ROCKS

By Sarah Thuma

Thursday, August 29th marked the 75th anniversary of Southwestern's Moundbuilding Ceremony. This year the ceremony returned to a tradition of the ceremony that had been lost. Like their predecessors, students began the ceremony by walking around campus carrying torches, admiring the dedicated rocks on campus, and reliving some of Southwestern's history. The Campus Players rock by Christy, the 1958 Jinx Plaque on the 77, and the Heritage rock in front of Beech Science Center were among the tour stops. By dusk the SC community had meandered their way to the base of the mound in front of the newly renovated Mossman Hall. Then organizations, students, and friends found the perfect place for their rock on the mound. Several individuals had to scale the ever-growing mound to find a good spot, some used teamwork to lift their massive rocks in place, and others just tossed their small decorated pebble onto the heap. After all was said and done, everyone left behind a small contribution as a symbol of the invincible spirit of Southwestern.

AND THE JOURNEY BEGINS...

by Miranda Harris and Elise Eilts

The first week of school is all about getting to know people and hearing about the past summer. Gina Kimble, the new director of Student Life, organized events ranging from Sundae Sunday to Kick Back Day's mud and sand volleyball competitions. Other events included the Welcome Back Carnival, the Jammin' Jinx Dance, Grocery Market Bingo, and Activity Fair.

Natalie Carlson said, "My favorite part of Fall Frenzy was working with the Big Brothers, Big Sisters program and pairing up with a little girl for the carnival. It was so much fun to watch her eyes light up as she played the games and rode the swings for the first time."

Students had the opportunity to see old friends and compare summer adventures while eating ice cream, meeting new people at the dance, and discovering ways to get involved with clubs. Giveaways and food helped lure students to the events. "Prizes, prizes, prizes! Almost every event had opportunities for winners, which means lots of chances to win prizes," said Shelley Luginsland.

"The purpose of Fall Frenzy is to familiarize new students with the SC campus as well as to provide exciting activities that new and returning students will enjoy before the academic year begins. Fall Frenzy is an excellent opportunity for the SC community to meet new faces and welcome back familiar ones."

NOW ENTERING CANDYLAND

By Miranda Harris

The annual Beta Sigma Phi Winter Formal was held on December 7th at the American Legion. "I enjoyed the new location of the dance because it was nice to have it off-campus," said Lisa Broberg. The theme for the dance was Candyland, upon entering the dance, it was as if you were walking on the Candyland game board.

Sonic provided slushies and there was also a lot of candy to snack on. Vince DeGrado was the disc jockey. "It was nice to see everyone dressed up, instead of just in jeans and T-shirts," said Amy King. The one complaint from the girls was the lack of guys at the dance.

"Decorating for the dance was a good time for the sisters to have fun and bond."

ROAD PARTY

By Elise Eilts and Miranda Harris

Sponsored by Beta Sigma Phi and SAA, the annual luau combined the pool with a Hawaiian atmosphere to relieve building stress about finals. Held on April 24th, the student body flocked to White P.E. to play in the water and win door prizes. "This year's luau was a huge success. The Beta sisters were extremely pleased with the turnout," said Rachel Ferguson.

"This year's luau was awesome and next year's will be even better!"

TAKING IT ON THE ROAD

By Julie Morgan

On Tuesday, April 15, 2003, the Talent/No Talent Show was held in Messenger Recital Hall. Students and faculty came out at 7:30 pm to enjoy the show sponsored by SAA with Jarod Beneke as the Master of Ceremonies.

There were six different acts, each competing for the $100 prize in one of four categories: individual talent, individual no talent, group talent, and group no talent.

The winners were Kendall Dean and Omari Head, individual talent; Seth Roach, individual no talent; Campus Players, group talent; and Phi Delta Theta and Beta Sigma Phi, group no talent. The other two acts were Carina McGowan and Ling Li-Yen, individual talent, and Josiah Chieng and Mark Chan, individual no talent.

"The Talent/No Talent show was a good experience for students to watch and participate in. It was exciting to see some of the hidden talents that SC students possess."

THURSDAY NIGHT CRUISE

By Elise Eilts

SAA took on the task of livening up Southwestern Campus with the creation of Thursday Night Live.

During the spring semester, the snack bar area in the student center was busy with students learning new dance styles, playing bingo for small prizes, and making seasonal crafts.

Activities were arranged to appeal to the widest number of students. Participants were given the opportunity to escape from the stress of classes and learn a new talent or refine an established one.

SAA students and sponsors helped with dance instruction and craft projects. Sponsors also called numbers for bingo.

"I went to the Latin dancing session. Josh Melcher was my partner and we had a lot of fun because we were the best salsa dancers ever!"
