Refresh. Your mind feels it. Your body feels it. Everyone around you can see it. No matter what last time brought, you're confident that this is your time. As you walk into a new situation with new hopes and goals, you feel prepared to take on a new year. The walk to class seems shorter, the time with your friends seems longer and the feeling of success feels sweeter. It's a smell. It's a view. Most of all, it's a feeling. You've clicked the Refresh button on this year and it's already loading up to be better than ever.

Refine. Once you have something good, there's no reason why you can't make it even better. However, fine-tuning and improving an efficient machine is no easy task. You may have to examine specific details that can't be seen from the outside. It takes tinkering and fiddling with parts and pieces that may be tricky to operate. You may even have to take it apart or remove portions of the machine to install upgrades or replacements. None of this is easy. But the finished product is worth the hard work. Creating something that's even better is always a sight to see.

After more than sixteen years, Dick Merriman, president, is set to leave Southwestern College following the conclusion of the spring semester of 2015. He plans to join the staff at the University of Mount Union in Alliance, Ohio for the 2015 fall semester.

With his impending departure, Merriman reflected on what brought him to Winfield in the first place. Growing up in southwestern Kansas, Merriman's father was a United Methodist minister. He was brought up to believe and connect with the mission of the institution that he grew up in. "I knew a little about the college and a lot about this part of the country," Merriman said. "The visit was really great and we felt really comfortable here."

Merriman mentions that he believes that he had a significant impact on the growing of enrollment at Southwestern College. "When I got here, there were maybe 700 undergraduates and maybe four or five graduate students," said Merriman. "The enrollment of the college has [grown] to about 1800. We now have typically 300 or 400 graduate students, so we stretched out the range of who we serve."

Merriman doesn't believe many obstacles will stop Southwestern College's next president from being successful. "It's just figuring out the variety of jobs that come with being a president in a small private college," he said. "There are a lot of moving parts and you just have to find the things you can be good at and try to excel at those and realize you can't do everything."

"You have to rely on other people," Merriman said. "We have very good senior administrators here, so there's a good team ready and waiting for the next president."

Scholar of the College

The senior student with the highest grade point average is recognized at the matriculation convocation each fall. The selection is made from full-time students who are enrolled in campus-based programs and have earned 85 or more hours (at least 30 of which are graded hours earned at Southwestern), have not earned a degree, and have not previously been named to the honor. In the event that several students rank equally, all share the honor.

1) What do you love about SC?

One of the main aspects that I love about SC is the family atmosphere that is present on the campus. There is a sense of support and comradery that really helps to drive students to do their best in the pursuit of a degree. This was one of the main reasons that I chose to come to the school and is one of the main results of my time here. I have a multitude of lifelong friends and colleagues in many different fields of expertise that I will keep in contact with throughout my life.

2) Where did you grow up?

I am from Ottawa, KS.

3) What did you major in while at SC?

B.MUS. in Music Education; B.MUS. in Music Performance, Voice; and a Minor in Leadership Studies

4) Were you a part of any sports teams or organizations?

I participated in Leadership Southwestern, Tonebuilders, Worship Outreach, and Southwestern College Theatre while at SC. I was also a part of Jazz Band, A Cappella Choir, and SC Singers within the music department.

5) What career are you planning to embark on?

My ultimate goal is to be a professor of voice and opera at a university. I will be starting a graduate degree in the fall and will plan on pursuing a doctoral degree soon after the completion of my graduate degree. Currently, I am the Director of the Community Music School at Southwestern College, as well as being a Chapter Development Officer for Pi Gamma Mu, the International Honor Society for the Social Sciences.

6) What's your favorite food?

Chinese Food

7) What is the greatest thing about Winfield, KS?

Winfield reminds me a lot of my hometown. The greatest thing about the town in my opinion is the acceptance of college students by the community. I have only ever received kind heartedness from community members in their interactions with both the college and the performing arts department.

1. Dr. Karen Countryman-Roswurm, speaks to the student body about Human Trafficking and the hardships that the victims face. Her informative presentation raised awareness of issues and was followed by students gathering in small groups to brainstorm solutions for this world issue. 2. EJ Dobbins, business administration senior, Drew Hudson, biology junior, Bryan Lipsey, sport management junior, Josh Sipes, mathematics senior, Cameron Clark, physical education senior, Joshua Howard, psychology sophomore, Reed Williams, liberal arts and sciences freshman, brainstorm ideas to raise awareness about human trafficking. They designed an eye-catching poster. 3. Catherine Cranmer, sport management senior, and Kayla Lovell, athletic training junior, paint on a poster to raise awareness of the issue. Their slogan was "End It." 4. Jordan Garcia, business administration junior, Jess De La Cruz, accounting junior, Nik Kraft, liberal arts and sciences freshman, Jose Avila, business administration freshman, Brandon Beyer, physical performance & sport studies junior, and Hayden Henderson, sport management sophomore work together with different mediums to get their message across. The soccer teammates used arts and crafts to highlight the urgency of human trafficking. 5. Montana Rickey, biochemistry senior, Destyne Donaldson, elementary education freshman, Jana Reichenberger, biology junior, Kayla Demel, athletic training sophomore, Jordan Hobbs, biology senior, Jordyn Miller, athletic training freshman, McKenzie Thiel, biology freshman, Lindsay Schumacher, chemistry junior, Kenzi Taylor, biology sophomore, Maddi Stuart, biology junior, and Hana Bruner, athletic training freshman, take a break from their campaigning. They also used arts and crafts to raise awareness. 6. Alison Ormbaun, biology junior, Sarah Loesing, biology junior, Brittaney Craddock, psychology junior, Jacqueline Erlanson, accounting junior, and Ashton Isch, athletic training junior, hold up their completed poster. Their poster incorporated a challenge to wear navy blue to the volleyball game that week to raise awareness. 7. Gabriel Lynch, accounting freshman, Luke Nespor, athletic training freshman, Breno Schmit, business administration junior, Reggie Surrell, business administration sophomore, William Tisdale, sport management junior, Jacob Horsch, business administration freshman, Landers Riddle, sport management senior, Ashton Palmer, physical performance & sport studies, and Chris Waller, physical education junior brainstorm together on ways to combat human trafficking. They designed a poster to display their message. 8. Wendee Harris, early childhood education sophomore, Zachery Lagunas, psychology freshman, Kelsey Buffum, elementary education junior, Ashley Smith, psychology freshman, Isaac Stanley, history freshman, Skye Loving, physical education junior, Nick Warnke, business administration senior, and Taylor Parker, physical performance and sport studies, wrote "HOPE" on their arms to show their support for the victims. They empathized with the victims of this tragic dilemma.

Kenna Corley Coordinator of Social Networking

Which social media sites do you manage for SC, and how can we find them?

I oversee the main campus Facebook page (Facebook.com/SouthwesternCollegeKansas), main campus Twitter (@Moundbuilders) and the main campus Instagram (@Moundbuilders).

How long have you been coordinating the social media at SC?

I started this job December 2013.

How did you come across this position?

Stacy Sparks actually notified me about this position when it became open. I had maintained contact with her since I graduated and I'm so glad I did! She played a big part in helping me get this job.

What year did you graduate and what did you major in?

I graduated in December of 2008 with a B.S. in Computer Science, emphasis in Digital Arts.

Where did you grow up?

Mooreland, Oklahoma

What's your favorite food?

Breakfast

What's the best part about your job?

The best part of my job is definitely my coworkers. I love being a part of a creative team where we can bounce ideas off each other and give honest, constructive criticism about projects. We help each other and the encouragement I get from them is so helpful.

What's the best part about SC?

The best part about SC is the size, I think. I'm a family-oriented person so it's comforting to know the names of almost all the faculty and staff on campus and they know me. Each year I've gotten to know more students and they really are something special. As cliché as it sounds, it's truly like a big Builder family here. (And it doesn't hurt that my actual sister is here too.)

1. Cullen Grantham, junior goalkeeper, Luka Cluff, sophomore midfielder, Luiz Reyes, junior midfielder, Jacob, Montoya, junior defender, Raul Estrada, sophomore midfielder, Jordan Garcia, junior midfielder, Caleb Partin, sophomore defender, Mayo Akintunde, senior midfielder, Zach Meeker, junior defender, Ian Mutio, senior forward, and Kevin Finnegan, sophomore defender, make up the starting lineup for the Builders against Tabor College. The national anthem was played and then the players were introduced to the crowd before the whistle was blown. (House) 2. Cullen Grantham, junior goalkeeper, rolls the ball out from the back. Grantham was the starting goalkeeper for the Builders this season. (Vadillo) 3. Luka Cluff, sophomore midfielder, attempts to take on an Oklahoma Baptist defender. The Builders would fall to OBU, 4-1. (Vadillo) 4. Cullen Grantham, junior goalkeeper, watches Dalton Carver, senior defender, bring the ball up the field from defense. Carver played right-back for the Builders. (Vadillo) 5. Kevin Guerrero, junior midfielder, turns away from a defender from Mid-America Christian University. Guerrero used his skills on the ball to add creativity to the Builders' midfield. (Dunning) 6. Mayo Akintunde, senior midfielder, with the ball at his feet. Akintunde played defense against Bethel College. (Vadillo) 7. Raul Estrada, sophomore midfielder, volleys the ball to a teammate while holding off a player from Mid-America Christian University. Estrada demonstrated great skill with the ball at his feet all season. (Dunning) 8. Jordan Garcia, junior midfielder, looking up before playing the ball. Garcia was one of the captains for the Builders this season in his final year for the team. (Vadillo) 9. Kevin Finnegan, sophomore defender, shields the ball from an Oklahoma Baptist player. Finnegan played with an increased confidence this season in his second year as a Builder. (Vadillo) 10. Cristian Cortes, junior defender, pauses with the ball. Cortes played left-back for the Builders. (Vadillo) 11. Ian Mutio, senior forward, shows sportsmanship. Mutio had previously fouled the player from Tabor College, and returned to apologize. (House) 12. Luiz Reyes, senior midfielder, shields the ball from a Bethel College player. Reyes impressed in his final year for the Builders. (Vadillo)

1) Why did you choose SC?

I loved the tradition, campus and teachers along with the chance to be part of the basketball program.

2) Where did you grow up?

I am from Sabetha, Kan.

3) What is your major?

Mathematics and secondary education.

4) Who is your favorite SC Instructor?

Ed Loeb.

5) What career are you planning to embark on?

I am going to be a middle or high school math teacher as well as a coach and sponsor different activities in a school. I am not sure where yet, but everything is looking like I will be at Oxford.

6) What is your favorite food?

Man, I like hot dogs.

7) What is your best memory at SC?

Christmas break my sophomore year. When we were all back, and there was no one at the dorms. It was just the basketball team chilling all day, eating free food and practicing basketball for two hours a day. I really enjoyed sleeping in and just doing nothing for 8-10 hours a day.

8) Were you a manager in high school?

For three years for Sabetha High School. I only played my freshman year.

9) Did you dream of playing college basketball?

When I was a kid, I always wanted to play for Duke.

8) What kept you motivated throughout college?

The fact that I wanted to get a career and have a job after graduation, having an end-goal. I did not want to do the hard labor jobs.

Nigerians poking their fingers in your chest and handing out death threats. Bullets whizzing by deviating inches from your head.

These were a few of the gut-wrenching stories that Sebastian Junger, award-winning author and American journalist, shared at the Docking Lecture on March 5 in the Richardson Performing Arts Center.

Junger spent more than 20 years as a freelance war correspondent traveling from Bosnia, Afghanistan, Kosovo, Liberia, Sierra Leone, Chad and Nigeria.

Along with being a war correspondent, Junger has also published several non-fiction books and several films. His film "Restrepo" was nominated for an Academy Award in 2010 for Best Documentary. It also won the Grand Jury Prize Documentary at the 2010 Sundance Film Festival. Junger has also acquired an Emmy for News and Documentary.

Lee Jones is the technical director for the Tomari Theatrical Arts and Technologies Center. He was the theater technician for Plano Stages in Plano, Texas and has also worked in Denton, Texas at the Children's Drama School.

Jones graduated from McMurry University in Abilene, Texas. In high school, Jones spent most of his time in the theater program. "I was heavily involved," said Jones. He tried to play the sports that were offered and also participated on the yearbook and student council.

Jones feels at home at Southwestern College and seems to be in his comfort zone. Jones intends to improve the theater department at Southwestern by teaching students new techniques. He also hopes to find the best way for the students to succeed.

Jones will spend most of his time in the Tomari Center. The Texas native is excited to explore all that he can so students will go on to be a part of something bigger and better. He is ready to kick off his career at Southwestern. "It's a nice school with big ambitions," he said.

Most Outstanding Student-Athlete Award

Seniors Rachel Baker and Paul Mata were named the 2015 Southwestern College Most Outstanding Student-Athletes.

Baker has been a starting pitcher for the Lady Builder softball team for each of the last three seasons. Her 308 career strikeouts will go down in the record books as the second-most in program history, while her 354 innings pitched is the third-most in program history. Baker is a two-time All-KCAC selection, and a three-year Academic All-KCAC selection. She has also been the Sutton Hall Resident Advisor for two years, has been a STUFU member for three years, including a year as the Vice President of Traditions, and is the Enactus Vice President. Baker has secured a job at the BDO accounting firm in Dallas, Texas, and will start her job after graduation.

Mata, meanwhile, was a four-year member of the Southwestern College football team, where he started 37 of the 44 games in his career. In that time, he recorded 166 solo tackles, and assisted on 154 more, taking his career total to 320 total tackles. Mata also recorded 11.5 career sacks, 45 tackles for loss, broke-up seven passes, and intercepted one. He finished No. 26 in the nation in tackles as a senior, and led the team in tackles as both a freshman and a sophomore. Mata served as a team captain for two seasons, is a three-time All-KCAC honoree, a two-time NAIA Champion of Character recipient, and is a 2014-15 CoSIDA Academic All-District 3 selection. He also won the team's Bud Elliot award. Away from football, Mata is the Treasurer for Pi Gamma Mu, and is active in 9 Lives, theater, and is a Resident Assistant. He has volunteered at numerous events, including Safe Homes, and the City of Winfield's Downtown Clean-Up. He will graduate with a degree in Philosophy & Religion.

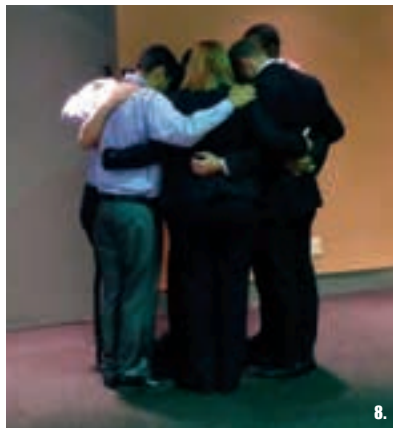

Other finalists for the Most-Outstanding Student-Athlete award included: Caitlin Harris, Sara Peck, Alyssa Richardson, Montana Rickey, Morgan Workman, Michael Bond, Dalton Carver, Shane Gilbert and Nick Warnke.

Recognize: Caroline Garbato

volleyball head coach

Caroline Garbato is more than 5000 miles from her hometown of São Paulo, Brazil, but this isn't exactly new territory for her. Garbato was recruited to play volleyball for Oral Roberts University in Tulsa. While playing the sport she loved, she earned a bachelor's degree in health and physical education. When it comes to the sport of volleyball, Garbato strives to be a positive impact to her athletes'. She puts in long hours, learning the finer details and studying new tactics and plays to ensure that no matter what, she can be at the top of her game when it comes to coaching her team. Before coaching at Southwestern she coached volleyball at the high school and club volleyball level. (Gabby Gamez updates.org)

Molly Just
Director of Discipleship

1) Briefly describe your first year at SC.

I think it has been adventurous. I was a student in Discipleship so being on the flip-side it's different, but it's fun to see how the program works and that's been really rewarding for me.

2) What was your favorite event this year at SC?

One of our students, Brandi Young, she's a junior; we have our junior team lead the rest of our team as a part of the discipleship program, and Brandi Young works with a committee of people, and together they started a food pantry challenge at the beginning of the year. It was a challenge to people from the college to collect food items for the pantry and then to raise money, and then she challenged other business around Winfield to join the cause and that's something that's been happening behind the scenes but it's been extremely and wildly successful. I think to date there's been maybe 14,000 food items that have been collected for the food pantry, along with what is close now to about $3,000. So it's been a project that's been happening behind the scenes, but it's been really cool to watch students do.

3) What has been the biggest challenge of the year for you?

I think the biggest challenge has been looking at the program as a whole and seeing what bits and pieces can stay the same, and what bits and pieces can change, so we can move forward. That's been challenging because I think sometimes people want change to happen really fast, but sometimes a better way to make change happen is to observe how everything is already running and then make a wise decision about how to move forward. Just trying to be patient and not change a whole bunch of things at once.

4) How would you describe Winfield to someone that's never been before?

I think Winfield, Kansas is a gem! That's what I'd call it. It's a good mix of small-town life, but it's not too small, and it's close to Wichita so that's nice. You can have small-town living with big-city benefits.

5) What is something significant that you have learned in your first year here?

I think the biggest thing I've learned is that teams can work together, that student can do really powerful things - not that I doubted it but just to see it in action. The other thing I learned that goes along with that is that from a spiritual point of view, being able to look back in retrospect is where I have seen God's hand at work. Sometimes when you're in the midst of things, you ask yourself "Is God working here?" but looking back in retrospect you're like "Wow, that was a really powerful moment!" or "That was really the hand of God in that situation." Whether it be in the covenant group or the food pantry challenge, looking back and seeing things in a more wholistic way has been really cool.

6) What is your favorite part about your job?

Working with students for sure. They're so open to new ideas and they just have really great vision and are not really scared to do things. They're not afraid to ask questions, and sometimes adults are afraid to do those things, or they're afraid of challenging the status quo or maybe rocking the boat a little, but students are not, so working with students has been my favorite part.

Crandall said, "I would like to say thank you to the faculty, staff and students at SC. Our family has truly enjoyed the relationship that we have built here over the last 8 years." The season before his resignation the football team held a record of 1-10. (buildersports.com) (Ingalls) eSports. It's in the game.

"It's basically computer sports," said Zenas Lopez, eSports coach. Computer sports is a new thing to colleges but not to the world. Lopez said, "eSports really took off in Korea a few years ago. On the other side of the world it is huge. People who are professional players are considered rock stars. We're talking about million dollar contracts. They're getting paid equivalent to our major league athletes. In the United States it just picked up about three years ago."

Southwestern is just the third college in the nation to offer scholarships to students for participation in eSports. Promotion began during the spring semester. Nick Carlson, computer science sophomore, received the first scholarship. Marla Sexson, vice president for enrollment management, has been working on spreading the word about Southwestern College and the new eSports program. Sexson said, "We are promoting the program through a way that the students interested in eSports will see it. We have put it as ads on online gaming sites and on social media. We also just put out a press release about it." Tom Jacobs, chairperson for the communication, computer science, and English division sees this as a good opportunity for the college because of the amount of interest that students have shown in competitive gaming.

Lopez also sees it as a great opportunity for SC. "I think the connections that we have with the Chinese students is an amazing opportunity to recruit more from there. Also, I feel like most colleges don't do enough for the undecided person. There's so many who are in sports or theatre. This is kind of a way of being able to get more students to come to college because they actually enjoy something," said Lopez.

Competitive video gaming is done with a variety of games. The one SC will be competing in for now is League of Legends. Lopez said they are keeping it small and focused on one game but they hope to expand to compete in more games. There is an LOL club that meets once a month. It's where the idea to compete came about. Lopez guessed there are probably about 60 to 70 students who play LOL on their own time. About 40 people usually come to monthly meetings.

So how does this competitive gaming work? For LOL specifically, it is teams of five players playing against each other. "It's kind of the equivalent to playing chess, team chess," said Lopez. "Traveling is one component," Lopez said. "Sometimes there is travel for tournaments and others can be played from where you are. Last semester a group of five students competed in a tournament in the College Star League. They made it to the finals but had to forfeit because all of the team members were traveling over break and wouldn't make it back for the game. Typically a tournament will start out online and teams play from what would be considered their home court. In major collegiate tournaments when you get to the top tier, or the championship, they fly you out to California to play at the actual gaming company's studio. The Southwestern team created a room with a Wi-Fi connection for the sport to be based. Tryouts for the team were Jan 30.

The cheer team choreographed all routines themselves, as they were without a coach this season. 8. Sterling Pray, biology sophomore, cheers at Hartman Arena during the women's basketball championship game. Pray is in her second season of cheer at SC.

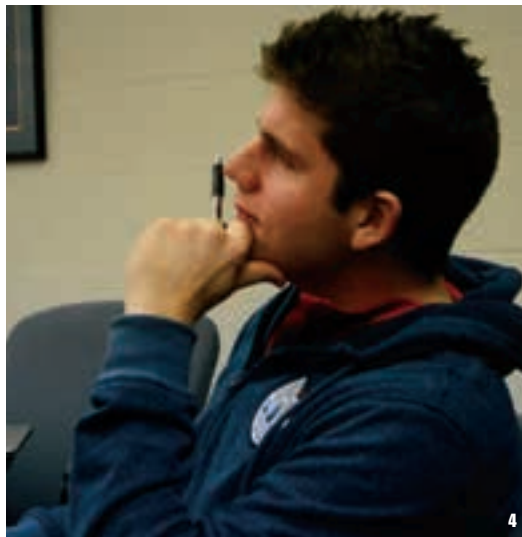

Southwestern cheer started the year off strong and finished with goals set for next season. They started new traditions, as well as a goal of competing in the future. As the team grew in numbers, they wanted to grow as friends and teammates as well. The cheer team stepped up their involvement with the community as they were a part of Homecoming festivities, as well as organizing clinics for younger students interested in cheering. The cheer team demonstrated their Builder pride by decorating the football locker room before each game. With the season coming to a close, a new one loomed with the desire to achieve their goal of becoming varsity.

New Faculty

New faculty members and a new dean joined the staff in August. 1. Peter Heckman is the academic dean for main campus. Heckman was a professor of interdisciplinary studies and associate dean at the University College, Zayed University in United Arab Emirates, and was an administrator and taught at Nebraska Wesleyan University in Lincoln, Neb. 2. You might not have heard of an Academic Press on campus before and that's because it wasn't a regular group. There is a very special reason the group has assembled this year. Last winter, Pamela Thompson, adjunct professor in the English department and editor of the Academic Press, and her co-author, Jerry Wallace, put together all the history of Southwestern College and sent it to Arcadia Publishing to apply for the opportunity to be published as part of a college history series. "It began with an idea from Andy Sheppard. He wanted to publish academic texts that were somehow related to either faculty or concepts connected to Southwestern," said Thompson. After a school sends in their application with photos and captions telling a story of the college history, the board decided if the school has an interesting enough past to be published in the series. After about a month of tense waiting, Thompson and Wallace heard their application had been accepted and they started making plans. Being accepted was a big honor for Southwestern. The college pledged to buy a minimum of 600 copies of the finished project. The story had seven chapters, starting with the opening of the college in 1885, when only two of the students were women. It then wound through stories like the Christy fire and finally ended with Dick Merriman's era coming to an end. The only other school in Kansas to be a part of this series is Emporia College. "I really want to tell the story of Southwestern as best I can. It is a long history dating from 1885 up to today and that is a long survival time for a midwestern college," said Wallace. To meet the criteria of the publishers, they had to have a minimum of 180, but no more than 240 photographs. The book consisted of photos with detailed captions. They decided to grant credit to students helping with the process. A group of eight students were in the class. "So far we have looked through the archives, looked at pictures, and learned how to make captions," said Aniefiok Ukim, business sophomore. Some might say this sounds like an easy task but telling a story with only 180 pictures and some captions is a timely task. Thompson stressed how big of a challenge was to select what made the cut for the final submission. The class completed two projects. Not only did they get this book ready for publication as part of the college history series, they also in searched for some other pieces of work from local writers Thompson said, "We want to put out a call for submissions of literary works, poetry, fiction and nonfiction, by regional writers. We want those submissions to come in this spring. After receiving these new works, a board looked them over and pieced the works together to make a new volume ready to be printed in the fall of 2015. The main focus of the class was to search through the many years of Southwestern history and piece it together in only a couple hundred pages. "It is a story of people who built this place. We are all builders and we want to try and convey that as best we can in the book and how that produced the people that it has over the years, why Southwestern is special," said Wallace.

Recognize:

Brian Winnie
Assistant Professor of Music
Director of Choral Activities & Voice

1) Describe in one sentence your first year at SC.

A change that has been both collaborative and exciting.

2) What was your favorite event this year at SC?

I think I'd have to say "Spamalot."

3) What has been the biggest challenge of the year for you?

Probably reaching out to as many students as we can. There is room to improve in that area in the years to come.

4) How would you describe Winfield to someone that's never been before?

I would tell them that it is a quaint little town with amazing views.

5) What is something significant that you have learned in your first year here?

That one can truly find a job that has everything you love.

6) What is your favorite part about your job?

The best part of my job here at Southwestern is working with the students.

Amber Peterson
Assistant Professor of Music,
Kilmer Chair for Strings Education

1) Describe in one sentence your first year at SC.

My first year at SC has been a whirlwind, but I enjoy what I'm doing.

2) What was your favorite event this year at SC?

My favorite event of the year was the first South Kansas Symphony concert this season. As the new conductor, I wasn't sure what to expect from the musicians or the audience.

3) What has been the biggest challenge of the year for you?

Conducting the pit orchestra for "Spamalot" was a challenge because many faculty and staff were combining efforts, but the final product was well worth it.

4) How would you describe Winfield to someone that's never been before?

Winfield is a close-knit community that supports much of the music at SC.

5) What is something significant that you have learned in your first year here?

While I've played in many community orchestras, it wasn't until I began working with the South Kansas Symphony that I understood all that went into such organizations behind the scenes.

6) What is your favorite part about your job?

The best part of my job is working with all the SC students involved in music, whether they're music majors or not.

Review. Traditions are as solid as the rocks that form the Mound. Participating in customs that have been carried out for years makes you part of something bigger than yourself. That perspective can lead to becoming a better person. Looking at what you've already accomplished can lead to something greater in the future. There is always room to polish the foundation for your future. You can learn something from the rocks and roots of your past.

Revisit: Walnut Valley Festival

The Walnut Valley Association was formed in 1972 to produce the Walnut Valley National Guitar Flat-Picking Championships Festival, also known as the Flat-Picking Championships, currently known as the "Walnut Valley Festival" or simply "Winfield" to the long time attendees. Evolving from two days in 1972 to its current four days the third weekend of September annually, it endeavors to produce "family fare" entertainment on four stages simultaneously, a large quality, juried arts and crafts fair, workshops, and acoustic instrument contests. What began with 10 acts and two contests now boasts over 40 acts and eight contests, including one international contest, five national contests and two Walnut Valley contests. The Walnut Valley Festival has always been a place to make new friends and renew old acquaintances. (<http://www.wvfest.com/>)

1.) How long have you lived in Winfield?

I've lived in Winfield for 20-25 years of my life. I lived in Texas for a few years.

2.) How many times have you attended Walnut Valley Festival?

I've been to Bluegrass for 23 years. The only times I've missed out were when I was six weeks old and once when I was in high school.

3.) What's your favorite part about the festival?

I don't think I really have a single favorite part; there are so many great reasons to go. Certainly, one of the highlights is getting to see people you've met over the years and only get to see at Bluegrass every year. The whole atmosphere is about peace, love, and enjoying good music all day and night.

4.) Will you continue attending the festival?

I've permanently reserved the third weekend in September on my calendar.

5.) What is your favorite memory of the festival?

One of my favorite memories that stands out in my mind was when I earned the opportunity to play on Stage 2 when I was 10 years old.

Renew: Brad Andrews New President

Dr. Brad Andrews was named president of Southwestern College May 12. He was senior vice president for student success and strategic enrollment at Carthage College in Kenosha, Wisc., Andrews became the 18th president of the college when he began his tenure July 1.

Andrews replaced President Dick Merriman, who accepted a position as president of the University of Mount Union after 17 years at Southwestern.

"We feel Brad Andrews is an ideal fit for Southwestern College, and could not be more pleased that he will be the next president," says Michael Lewis, SC trustee and chair of the search committee. "He has extensive successful experience in three areas crucial to the continued success of the college—fundraising, enrollment management, and student life. He also is a collaborative leader who will work well with faculty and administrators already in place to extend the excellence we have come to expect at Southwestern."

A native of Miami, Fla., Andrews earned his bachelor's degree in English from the University of Missouri in 1990 and went on to earn a master's degree in education from Drake University in 1994. In 2009, he earned a Ph.D. in educational leadership and policy analysis from the University of Wisconsin.

"For more than 130 years Southwestern College has defined a truly student-centered approach to higher education," Andrews says. "It is obvious that an exciting combination of tremendous people, a pioneering spirit, and outstanding programs have Southwestern College poised for great success moving forward. I am honored to be chosen to lead the Builder nation into the next era."

Rediscover

In 1927, Dean Leroy Allen proposed a new and unique custom. This tradition was that at the beginning of every school year, each of the Southwestern students, faculty, and friends place a rock on this mound bearing their name, signifying their desire to be a Builder. As more rocks are stacked upon this mound and the pile continues to grow it just signifies the growth and depth of the Builder Family.

From Student Athlete to Faculty

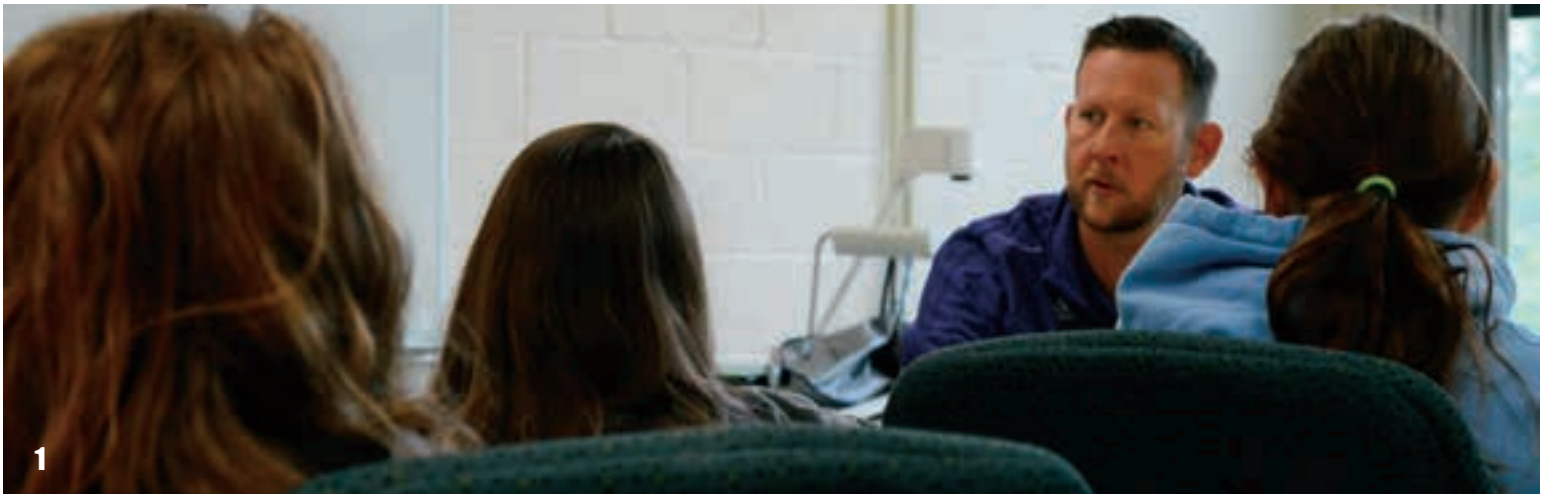

The Moundbuilder volleyball team won the KCAC in 1994. Several members of the team celebrated the championship during a homecoming reunion. Lisa Braun, director of athletic training education, celebrates her 20th year being at Southwestern College as a student athlete, athletic trainer, and now professor. Braun was a freshman on the 1994 conference champion volleyball team. "Being able to share it with such great people was an added bonus," she said.

"These people who were once my professors giving me assignments and exams, were now my colleagues," Braun said. "They always made me feel welcome and made it a smooth transition for me." At times, she misses the rush of being a student athlete, but said that she is "privileged to be a lifelong Moundbuilder."

Revisit: The Road to Nationals

The Lady Builders have created a legacy. Dave Denly, head coach, led the Women's Basketball team made it to the Div. 2 National Championship Tournament for the fifth year in a row. The Women's Basketball team solidified their trip to Nationals after becoming KCAC Champions by defeating the Friends Falcons in the Hartman Arena March 2. The Lady Builders traveled to Sioux City, Iowa for Nationals, but their season ended earlier than they would have liked with a loss against the Saint Francis Cougars in the first round of games on Wednesday, March 11. Although the Lady Builders came back to Winfield with a defeat, they also came back with amazing memories. They were given the opportunity to help with the Special Olympics along with other teams participating in the tournament. By Taylor Forrest

Director of Campus Life

What year did you graduate and what did you major in?

I graduated in May of 2011 with a B.S. in Business. I then graduated with my Masters in leadership in 2013. Both of my degrees came from SC.

How long have you been director of campus life at SC?

I started this job January 2015.

Where were you before coming back to SC?

I worked at Waldorf College which is located in Forest City, Iowa. My position there was director of student activities & orientation and I worked there for a year and six months.

How has the transition from Waldorf College to SC been and what has been the hardest adjustment?

It has been a good process but one that has required patience. The expectations and the difference in how things are done from one school to another varies so it was important to get a feel of how things are done here at SC. It is a lot different from being a student at SC rather than a staff so that requires adjustments.

How did you come across this position?

I love SC and I didn't want to leave to begin with but it was important for me to get out and spread my wings. I wanted to spread my SC knowledge out in the world and I did. The opportunity presented itself to come back and work here so I quickly took advantage of it.

What's the best part about your job?

The best part of my job is definitely having the opportunity to develop relationships with new students, along with current ones, and having the ability to impact their lives in a positive way.

What's some advice you would give students?

I would tell students to work hard everyday, make memories and experience new things. The most important advice I can give students is to not limit themselves. Don't be afraid to get out of your comfort zone and make sure to do things that you thought you never could.

1. Shane Schrag, theatre arts senior, and John Rohr, theatre arts junior, perform a scene during a 9 Lives game. The last 9 Lives performance of the semester took place on April 24 at Messenger Hall. (Dunning) 2. Students gather for Bingo Night on April 20 in the cafeteria. Students could dress up as their favorite Nintendo characters. (Dunning) 3. Audrey Vorderlandwehr, sport management senior, and Greg Reffner, religion and philosophy sophomore, get refreshments before the movie. It was the final Free Movie Night of the year. (Reyes) 4. Reed Williams, liberal arts freshman, and Kevin Guerrero, computer science junior, team up during Bongo Ball. Bongo Ball had representatives from all classes. (Dunning) 5. Emily Tilton, elementary education junior, and Shane Schrag, theatre arts senior, act out a story created by the audience during a 9 Lives performance as Caitlin Harris, biology senior, engages with Tilton and Schrag during the last 9 Lives of the semester. Audience members were invited to bring items to include in the skits. (Dunning) 6. Caitlin Harris, biology senior, performs with 9 Lives during a stand-up comedy game. Harris ended her improv career after four years. (Dunning) 7. Montana Rickey, biochemistry senior, prepares to play Bongo Balls. The objective of the game was to hit opponents with balls from the air-pressured guns. (Dunning) 8. Carlene Dick, psychology sophomore, plays Mario Kart on April 23. Bryant Belden, philosophy and religion freshman, cheers Dick to win the video game race. (Vadillo) 9. Paul Mata, philosophy and religion senior, explains the rules of a 9 Lives game. Mata was a member of 9 Lives for four years. (Dunning) 10. Darius Williams, sport management freshman, hides behind an inflatable during Bongo Balls. Two five-student teams competed in each game of Bongo Balls. (Dunning) 11. Emily Hicks, biology senior, waits for the movie theater opens. Movie Night was April 22 with screenings for "Furious 7," "Home," "Get Hard," "Cinderella," "Insurgent," "The Longest Ride," and "Paul Blart 2." (Dunning)

1. Abby Gengler, business administration senior, writes on the business division chalkboard at the department reception. Gengler already had a job lined up after graduation. (G. Gamez) 2. David J. Danelo, Director of Field Research at the Foreign Policy Research Institute, speaks at the Honors Convocation. Danelo is also a lecturer and author. (Stamper) 3. Rachel Baker, business administration senior, is recognized at the Order of the Mound. The ceremony initiated the top 10 percent of the class into the honorary society. (G. Gamez) 4. Graduates sing the alma mater at the conclusion of the Honors Convocation. The ceremony recognizes students for their academic achievements. (Stamper) 5. Jeremy Humble, computer science senior, Alyssa Richardson, communication senior, Mauricio Torres, computer science senior, Angel Vadillo, communication senior, Dalton Grant, computer science senior, Dalton Carver, communication senior and Hayley Mata, communication senior group for a photo. The six seniors attended their division reception. (Forrest) 6. Roger Moon, associate professor of theatre, leads the procession to the Honors Convocation. Students make the trek up the 77 each year. (Forrest) 7. Roger Moon, associate professor of theatre, awards a caricature to Juliette Lowrance, theatre arts senior. It's a tradition for campus players to receive the art. (Stamper) 8. Sara Peck, biology senior, Luiz Reyes, business administration senior, Montana Rickey, biology senior, Paul Mata, religion and philosophy senior, Jordan Hobbs, biology senior and Jessica Hobbs, biology senior were recognized as Master Builders. The plaques were awarded during the Honors Convocation. (G. Gamez) 9. Martin Rude, director of outreach ministry, sings during the Baccalaureate. He was one of several performances during the ceremony. (Stamper) Page Design.Carver

Refer. Sometimes you have to look it up. Even if you are sure, you consult an expert source for the answer. It's almost always worth it to be correct. Maybe you need to prove that you actually went to school with someone who turned out famous. Maybe you need to show your family back home just how weird that professor looked. Maybe you sat by someone for the entire semester and you don't know their last name. All of these things can be remedied by double-checking the past. You can use this information to boost your future.

Remember Remind Reoccur Replay Restart
Revamp Review Revolutionize Revisit Revisit Revisit

Remember. Remembering is a door to the past that we're not always eager to open. It's fun to remember all the good times had with good friends. It's hard to think of a future without them. It's useful to call upon past experiences to help you with current ones. Sometimes it's easier to forget embarrassing moments. Every now and then, nostalgia creeps up on us to remind us of what once was. The future may be hazy. Even though we don't know what's on the road ahead, we always know where we've been.
